Academic Writing

A Handbook for International Students
Second edition

Writing essays and dissertations can be a major concern for overseas students studying at English-medium colleges and universities. Virtually all courses contain a large degree of written assessment and it is essential to ensure that your writing skills meet the necessary standard. Academic Writing is a new kind of writing course for all international students who have to write exams or coursework in English. This practical book thoroughly explains the writing process and covers all the key writing skills.

Clearly organised into four parts, Academic Writing allows both teachers and students to quickly find the help they need with all writing tasks. Each part is split into short sections containing explanations, diagrams and practice exercises, for use in the classroom or self-study. Newly revised and updated, this second edition contains extra exercises and material – much of which has been suggested by teachers and students.

The text is complemented with cross-references and answers are provided to the exercises. Various writing models, such as CVs, letters and essays, are also included. Key features of the book are:

- Explains the writing process, from understanding the title to proof-reading
- Covers key writing skills such as referencing and paraphrasing
- Contains twenty-three units on accuracy in writing
- Adaptable for both long and short courses

Any international student wishing to maximise his or her academic potential will find this practical and easy-to-use guide to writing in English a truly indispensable resource.

Stephen Bailey has taught English for Academic Purposes at the University of Nottingham and the University of Derby for the past 10 years. Before that he taught English to students in the Czech Republic, Spain, Japan and Malaysia.

Introduction

Academic Writing is for international students studying in colleges and universities where courses are taught in English. Those students who are not native speakers of English often find the written demands of their courses very challenging. In addition to learning academic English they need to adopt new conventions of style, referencing and layout.

Students usually have to complete a variety of writing tasks during their studies, ranging from short IELTS essays to lengthy dissertations. This writing may be done either under exam pressure or as coursework. In addition, the type of writing they are asked to do depends on the subject they are studying: future lawyers will be given quite different tasks from potential pharmacists.

Academic Writing recognises this variety of needs. It is a flexible course that allows students of all subjects and levels, from foundation to PhD, to practise those aspects of writing which are most important for their studies. The book is organised to provide maximum hands-on practice for students. They can work either with a teacher or by themselves, since the structure of the book has been made as simple as possible to allow them to find what they want quickly.

Academic Writing is divided into four parts. In Parts 1 and 2 the focus is on key writing skills, while Parts 3 and 4 offer revision and reference. Parts 2 and 3 are organised alphabetically for easy access.

Part 1: The Writing Process guides students from the initial stage of understanding the essay title, through note-making and paraphrasing, to the organisation of the essay and finally proof-reading.

Part 2: Elements of Writing deals with the skills that are needed for most types of assignment, such as making comparisons, giving examples and describing graphs.

Part 3: Accuracy in Writing gives remedial practice in those areas that students often find confusing, such as using articles, passives or prepositions.

Part 4: Writing Models offers examples of the types of writing that students commonly need, including letters and survey reports as well as essays.

There is also a Writing Tests section for checking progress.

The four parts are divided into sixty-one short units which teach practical writing skills and revise common difficulties. Each unit contains exercises, and a comprehensive answer key is given at the end. A system of cross-referencing helps students link related units together.

Although every effort has been made to make Academic Writing as clear and accurate as possible, I would welcome comment or criticism from either teachers or students.

1. The Writing Process

Student Introduction

Most academic courses in English-medium colleges and universities use essays or other written tasks to assess students' work. These can be done as coursework, when a deadline of one or two months may be given, or in exams, when an essay often has to be finished in an hour.

The process of writing essays for coursework can be shown as a flowchart:

Part 1, The Writing Process, examines each of these stages in turn. If students are concerned only with preparing for exam writing they could miss out the reading and note-making stages, but if they have enough time they should work through every unit, preferably in the order given, since each stage builds on the previous one.

Although it is essential to learn the basic writing process, at the same time it is useful to be aware of the elements that contribute to good academic writing. When writing an introduction, for example, it is helpful to know how to write a definition, and so students working on Introductions (unit 1.14) should use the cross-reference boxes to look at the unit on Definitions in unit 2.5.

1.1 Background to Writing

Most university and college students are assessed through the production of written assignments. Some of the terms used to describe different types of assignments can be confusing. In addition, students need to be clear about the basic components of written texts. This unit provides an introduction to these topics.

1. Below are the most common types of written work produced or used by students.

Complete the table to show the main purpose of each, and their usual approximate length.

Type	Purpose	Length
letter	for formal and informal communication	usually fewer than 500 words notes report project essay
thesis/dissertation article/paper

2. Organisation of texts.

- a) Explain the following terms in italics:

Shorter texts, e.g. essays, are normally organised:

Introduction > Main Body > Conclusion

Longer texts, e.g. dissertations and articles, may include (depending on subject area):

Abstract > Contents > Introduction > Main Body > Case Study > Discussion > Findings > Conclusion > Acknowledgements > Bibliography/References > Appendices

Books may also contain:

Dedication > Foreword > Preface > Index

- b) Match the definitions below to one of the terms in (2a).

- i) Short summary (100–200 words) of the writer's purpose and findings (.....)
- ii) Section where various people who assisted the writer are thanked (.....)

- iii) Final part where extra data, too detailed for the main text, are stored (.....)
- iv) List of all the books that the writer has consulted (.....)
- v) Section looking at a particular example, relevant to the main topic (.....)
- vi) Introductory part of the book which may give the writer's motives (.....)
- vii) Alphabetical list of all topics in the text (.....)

cross-reference
3.1	Abbreviations
2.11	References and Quotations
3.14	Punctuation

3. Other text features

Abbreviations are often used to save space:

Call centres (CCs) feature prominently in the technology mix . . .

Italics are used to show titles and words from other languages:

Where once the titles of Armchair Theatre and The Wednesday Play celebrated . . .

Squatter housing (called gecekondu in Turkish) . . .

Footnotes are used to indicate references at the bottom of the page:

In respect of Singapore the consensus is that the government has made a difference.³

Endnotes are given to show references at the end of the article or chapter:

The market for masonry construction may be divided into housing and non-housing sectors [1].

Quotation marks are used to draw attention to a phrase, perhaps because it is being used in an unusual or new way:

The research shows that the 'pains of imprisonment' for women are . . .

4. All types of writing consist of a number of key elements.

Label the italic items in the text.

- a) THE ORIGINS OF THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION
- b) Introduction
- c) It is generally agreed that the Industrial Revolution began in Britain during the eighteenth century, with significant developments in the iron, steel and textile industries. But it is less clear what caused this sudden increase in production in key areas; different writers have examined the availability of capital, the growth of urban populations and the political and religious climate. All of these may have played a part, but first it is necessary to consider the precise nature of what is meant by 'industrial revolution'.
- d) Industry had existed for thousands of years prior to the eighteenth century, but before this time society as a whole remained agricultural. With the arrival of the ironworks and cotton mills whole towns were dominated by industrial activity. At the same time, agriculture itself went through significant changes which produced more food for the growing urban population.

1.12 Organising Paragraphs

5. Why are all texts divided into paragraphs? How long are paragraphs?

Read the following text, from the introduction to an essay, and divide it into a suitable number of paragraphs.

INVESTMENT

Most people want to invest for the future, to cover unexpected financial difficulties and provide them with security. Different people, however, tend to have different requirements, so that a 25-year-old just leaving university would be investing for the long term, whereas a 60-year-old who had just retired would probably invest for income. Despite these differences, certain principles apply in most cases. The first issue to consider is risk. In general, the greater the degree of risk in investment, the higher the return. Shares, for example, which can quickly rise or fall in value, typically have a higher yield than bonds, which offer good security but only pay about 5%. Therefore all investors must decide how much risk is appropriate in their particular situation. Diversification must also be considered in an investment strategy. Wise investors usually seek to spread their investments across a variety of geographical and business sectors. As accurate predictions of the future are almost impossible, it is best to have as many options as possible. A further consideration is investor involvement. Some investors opt for a high degree of involvement and want to buy and sell regularly, constantly watching the markets. Others want to invest and then forget about it. Personal involvement can be time-consuming and worrying, and many prefer to leave the management of their portfolios to professional fund managers.

1.2 Avoiding Plagiarism

All students have to face the issue of plagiarism. Plagiarism means taking information or ideas from another writer and using them in your own work, without acknowledging the source in an accepted manner. In academic work plagiarism can be a serious offence. This unit outlines the situation, but to fully avoid plagiarism students need to master the skills practised in units 1.6–1.10.

cross-reference

- 2.11 References and Quotations
- 3.22 Verbs of Reference

1. Which of the following would be considered as plagiarism?
 - a) Not providing a reference when you have used somebody's idea.
 - b) Copying a few sentences from an article on the internet without giving a reference.
 - c) Not giving a reference when you use commonly accepted ideas, e.g. Aids is a growing problem.
 - d) Giving the reference but not using quotation marks when you take a sentence from another writer's article.
 - e) Taking a paragraph from a classmate's essay without giving a reference.
 - f) Presenting the results of your own research.
2. To avoid plagiarism, and also to save having lengthy quotations in your work, it is necessary to paraphrase and summarise the original. Instead of this, students sometimes hope that changing a few words of the original will avoid charges of plagiarism. Clearly, you are not expected to alter every word of the original text, but your summary must be substantially different from the original.

Read the following extract on twentieth-century educational developments from Age of Extremes by E. Hobsbawm:

Almost as dramatic as the decline and fall of the peasantry, and much more universal, was the rise of the occupations which required secondary and higher education. Universal primary education, i.e. basic literacy, was indeed the aspiration of virtually all governments, so much so that by the late 1980s only the most honest or helpless states admitted to having as many as half their population illiterate, and only ten – all but Afghanistan in Africa – were prepared to concede that less than 20% of their population could read or write. (Hobsbawm, 1994, p. 295)

Which of the following are plagiarised and which are acceptable?

- a) Almost as dramatic as the decline and fall of the peasantry, and much more general, was the rise of the professions which required secondary and higher education. Primary education for all, i.e. basic literacy, was indeed the aspiration of almost all governments, so much so that by the late 1980s only the most honest countries confessed to having as many as half their population illiterate, and only ten – all but Afghanistan in Africa – were prepared to admit that less than 20% of their population could read or write. (Hobsbawm, 1994, p. 295)

- b) Nearly as dramatic as the decline of the peasantry was the rise of professions which required secondary and higher education. Primary education for everyone (basic literacy) was the aspiration of nearly all governments, so that by the late 1980s only the very honest countries confessed to having as many as half their population illiterate. Only ten (African) countries conceded that less than 20% of their population were literate. (Hobsbawm, 1994, p. 295)
- c) As Hobsbawm (1994) argues, there was a marked increase in jobs needing secondary or higher education during the twentieth century. All but a few nations claimed that the majority of their people were literate. Universal primary education i.e. basic literacy was indeed the aspiration of virtually all governments. (p. 295)
- d) There was a sharp and widespread increase in occupations requiring education above primary level. All governments set out to provide basic education, essentially literacy, for their people. By the end of the 1980s very few states would admit that the majority of their population were unable to read. (Hobsbawm, 1994, p. 295)

3. What makes the difference between plagiarised and acceptable work? List your ideas below.

Acceptable	Plagiarised
Some vocabulary kept from original

1.3 From Titles to Outlines

Most written work begins with a title, and students must be quite clear what question the title is asking before starting to plan the essay and read around the topic. This unit deals with analysing titles and making basic essay outlines.

1. When preparing to write an essay, it is essential to identify the main requirements of the title. You must be clear about what areas your teacher wants you to cover. These will then determine the organisation of the essay. For example:

The state should play no part in the organisation of industry – discuss.

Here the key word is discuss. Discussing involves examining the benefits and drawbacks of something.

Underline the key words in the following titles and consider what they are asking you to do.

- a) Define information technology (IT) and outline its main applications in medicine.
- b) Compare and contrast the appeal process in the legal systems of Britain and the USA.
- c) Evaluate the effect of mergers in the motor industry in the last ten years.
- d) Trace the development of primary education in one country. Illustrate some of the issues currently facing this sector.

Note that most of the titles above have two terms in the title. You must decide how much importance to give to each section of the essay: e.g. title (a) might require 10% for the definition and 90% for the explanation.

2. The following terms are also commonly used in essay titles.

Match the terms to the definitions on the right.

Analyse	Give a clear and simple account
Describe	Make a proposal and support it
Examine	Deal with a complex subject by giving the main points
State	Divide into sections and discuss each critically
Suggest	Give a detailed account
Summarise	Look at the various parts and their relationships

cross-reference
 1.11 Planning Essays

3. Almost all essays, reports and articles have the same basic pattern of organisation:

Introduction
Main body
Conclusion

The structure of the main body depends on what the title is asking you to do. In the case of a 'discuss' type essay, the main body is often divided into two parts, one looking at the advantages of the topic and the other looking at the disadvantages.

An outline for the example in (1) might look like this:

The state should play no part in the organisation of industry – discuss.

Introduction	various economic theories: Marxist, Keynesian, free market most economies display trend towards privatisation
Disadvantages	state protects workers from exploitation, e.g. children consumers protected from dangerous products, e.g. medical drugs state has resources to support new technologies
Advantages	few state-controlled economies are successful, e.g. Soviet Union state control does not encourage individual effort state intervention often leads to corruption
Conclusion	state has a role in protecting weakest, but should not interfere with free enterprise

4. Write an outline for one of the other titles in (1).

Title
Introduction
Main body
Conclusion

5. Teachers often complain that students write essays which do not answer the question set.

Consider the following titles and decide which sections should be included in each essay.

- a) Describe the growth of the European Union since 1975 and suggest its likely form by 2020.

A short account of European history 1900–2000

An analysis of candidates for membership before 2020

A discussion of the current economic situation in Europe

A summary of the enlargement of the EU from 1975 to now

- b) Summarise the arguments in favour of privatisation and evaluate its record in Britain.

A case study of electricity privatisation

An analysis of the international trends in privatisation

A study of major privatisations in the UK

A discussion of the benefits achieved by privatisation

- c) To what extent is tuberculosis (TB) a disease of poverty?

A definition of TB

A report on the spread of TB worldwide

A case study showing how TB relates to social class

A discussion of new methods of treating the disease

- d) Nursery education is better for children than staying at home with mother – discuss.

A study of the growth of nurseries in the UK since 1995

A report on the development of children who remain at home until age 5

A discussion comparing speaking ability in both groups of children

An analysis of the increase of women in the labour market since 1960

- e) Compare studying in a library with using the internet. Will the former become redundant?

The benefits of using books

The drawbacks of internet sources

Predicted IT developments in the next 15 years

The developments in library services since 1970

6. Underline the key terms in the following titles, and decide what you are being asked to do.

Example:

Relate the development of railways to the rise of nineteenth-century European nationalism.

Relate means to link one thing to another. The title is asking for links to be made between the growth of railways in Europe in the nineteenth century and the political philosophy of nationalism. The writer must decide if there was a connection or not.

- a) Identify the main causes of rural poverty in China.
b) Calculate the likely change in coffee consumption that would result from a 10% fall in the price of coffee beans.
c) Classify the desert regions of Asia and suggest possible approaches to halting their spread.

1.4 Evaluating Texts

Having understood the title and made an outline, the next step is probably to read around the subject. Although a reading list may be given, it is still vital to be able to assess the usefulness of journal articles and books. Time spent learning these skills will be repaid by avoiding the use of unreliable or irrelevant materials.

- When reading a text, it is important to ask yourself questions about the value of the text. Is this text fact or opinion? If fact, is it true? If opinion, do I agree? Can this writer be trusted? These questions can be seen as a process:

- Read the following sentences and decide first if they are fact or opinion. Then decide if you agree with the opinions, and if the factual sentences are true.

	Opinion or fact?	Agree or disagree?	True or false?
Example: The USA has the biggest economy in the world	Fact		True
a) Shakespeare was a great writer
b) Shakespeare wrote textbooks
c) Smoking can be dangerous
d) Too many people smoke in Britain
e) 95% of criminals cannot read
f) Poor education causes half of all crime

3. It can be seen that even short sentences, such as (2f) above, can contain a mixture of fact and opinion. Most longer texts, of course, consist of both.

Read the following text about crime in Britain and underline facts (_____) and opinions (.....).

- a) Britain has one of the highest crime rates in the world.
- b) A robbery takes place every five seconds. Clearly, criminals are not afraid of the police.
- c) Even if they are caught, few criminals ever appear in court.
- d) Most of those who are found guilty are let off with a small fine.
- e) To reduce crime, we need more police and tougher punishments.

4. The text can be evaluated as follows:

- a) Fact, but only partly true. Britain does not have one of the highest overall crime rates in the world. For some crimes, e.g. car crime, the rate is high, but other countries, e.g. South Africa, have much higher rates of violent crime.
- b) This may or may not be true, but it does not follow that criminals are unafraid of the police.
- c) Fact, but not true. A significant number of those arrested are charged and later prosecuted.
- d) This fact is distorted. A fine is not 'letting off'. What is meant by 'small'?
- e) This is opinion. More police would probably help reduce crime, but it is not clear if more severe punishments would have that result.

From this it can be seen that, even if the facts are correct, the opinions that are expressed may not be reliable. The evaluation above would suggest that the writer of the original text could not be trusted, and it would be better to look for another source.

5. Evaluate the following texts in a similar way, using the table below. First underline and assess the facts and opinions, then decide if the text as a whole is trustworthy.

Text	Are the facts true?	Do I agree with the opinions?	Trustworthy?

- a) Every year large numbers of students travel abroad to study at university. Most of them spend thousands of pounds on their degree courses. The cost of travel and accommodation adds significantly to their expenses. But they could save a lot of money by studying their courses on-line, using the internet and email. Increasing numbers of universities are offering tuition by the internet, and this has many advantages for students. In the future most students are likely to stay at home and study in front of a computer.
- b) London is an ideal city for young students. Britain's lively capital, with a population of two million, is the perfect place to live and study. Cheap, comfortable accommodation is always available, and transport is provided by the clean and reliable underground railway system. Another advantage is the friendly citizens, who are well-known for their custom of stopping to chat with strangers. Overall, London is probably the best place in the world to study English.

- c) Global warming affects most people in the world, especially those living in low-lying areas near the sea. It has been predicted that the melting of polar ice may cause the sea to rise by as much as twelve metres by 2050. This would cause flooding in many major coastal cities, such as Tokyo. It has been suggested that the best solution to this problem may be for mankind to become amphibious, like frogs. It is argued that life was originally found in the sea, and so it would merely be a return to our original habitat.
- d) There is significant new evidence of the effects of heavy alcohol consumption by young people. In Britain in 2000 nearly 800 people under 44 died from cirrhosis of the liver, a condition which is mainly caused by excess drinking. This is over four times higher than the number in 1970. The growing problem seems to be due to 'binge' drinking among the young, when drinkers deliberately set out to get drunk. As a result, the government is studying the possibility of compulsory health warnings on alcohol advertising.

1.5 Understanding Purpose and Register

Having decided that a text is reliable, a student must read and understand as much as necessary for the needs of the essay. Understanding a text is not just a matter of vocabulary; the reader needs to find out the writer's intentions. Is the writer aiming to inform, persuade, describe or entertain? In addition the reader should be clear about the type of English the writer is using: how formal is the tone? The answer to these questions may affect the way a student uses the material.

1. Compare the two extracts below:

- a) Rebus College is seeking candidates for the position of Treasurer. As the Chief Financial Officer of the College, the Treasurer is responsible for working with the senior administration and Trustees to develop and implement a financial strategic vision for the College.
- b) Are you wondering what to do with that jumper you were given for Christmas that's two sizes too small – or, worse, the personal stereo that simply doesn't work? Well, don't worry. Chances are, you'll be able to get your dud gifts swapped, fixed or get a refund. And, armed with our guide to your rights, you'll be able to get any defective products sorted.

The first extract is written to inform the reader about a job vacancy and to give information about the work. The second aims to persuade the reader to buy the guide described. The language style, or register, of the extracts is also very different. The first uses very formal vocabulary such as seeking, position and implement. The second uses an informal tone, the pronoun you, the question form and informal vocabulary such as dud and swapped.

2. Read the following extracts and complete the table using one or two of the following: inform/amuse/persuade/entertain.

- a) The lower you are in the office hierarchy, the more disgusting your sandwiches. You can safely assume that a chicken and banana man is not a main board director. Some people, generally those in accounts, have had the same sandwich for the past 30 years. People like to prove how busy they are by eating their sandwich at their desk. But this is counter-productive, because every time you take a mouthful the phone rings, and you'll only get to finish that last mouthful just before you go home.

- b) Writing for publication can be both profitable and enjoyable. It's open to everyone, because you don't need any qualifications. In Britain there is a huge demand for new materials, with thousands of newspapers and magazines published every week. In addition there are TV and radio programmes, the theatre and films. Given this situation, there are many openings for new writers. But the director of one of the UK's main writing colleges, the Writing Academy, advises: 'to enter this market successfully you must have good training'.
- c) The Advertising Standards Authority makes sure that advertising is legal, decent, honest and truthful. The Authority safeguards the public by ensuring that the rules contained in the British Code of Advertising Practice are followed by everyone who prepares and publishes advertisements in the UK, and that advice is freely available to prevent problems arising. The Code lays down what is and is not acceptable in advertisements, except for those on TV and radio.

1.6 Selecting Key Points

After selecting and understanding the most relevant texts, the next step is usually to make notes on the sections of the texts that relate to your topic. Units 1.6–1.9 practise this process, which involves a number of inter-linked skills. This unit deals with the identification of relevant information and ideas.

1.7 Note-making

1. The first stage of note-making is to identify the key points in the text for your purpose. You are preparing to write an essay on 'Changing patterns of longevity'.

Study the following example (key points in italics).

WHY WOMEN LIVE LONGER

Despite the overall increase in life expectancy in Britain over the past century, women still live significantly longer than men. In fact, in 1900 men could expect to live to 49 and women to 52, a difference of three years, while now the figures are 74 and 79, which shows that the gap has increased to five years.

Various reasons have been suggested for this situation, such as the possibility that men may die earlier because they take more risks. But a team of British scientists have recently found a likely answer in the immune system, which protects the body from diseases. The thymus is the organ which produces the T cells which actually combat illnesses. Although both sexes suffer from deterioration of the thymus as they age, women appear to have more T cells in their bodies than men of the same age. It is this, the scientists believe, that gives women better protection from potentially fatal diseases such as influenza and pneumonia.

Having selected these sections of the text, you can then go on to make notes from them:

British women live longer than men: 79/ 74 years reasons? new research suggests immune system/thymus > T cells women have more T cells than men = better protection

2. Read the following and then choose a suitable title which expresses the key point.

Title:

Dean Kamen is a 50-year-old American eccentric who is also a multi-millionaire. He always wears blue denim shirts and jeans, even when visiting his friend, the president, in the White House. He flies to work by helicopter, which he also uses for visiting his private island off the coast of Connecticut. As an undergraduate Kamen developed the first pump that would give regular doses of medicine to patients. The patent for this and other original medical inventions has produced a huge income, allowing him to run his own research company which, among many other projects, has produced the iBot, the world's first wheelchair which can climb stairs.

3. Underline three key points in the following text.

EMPOWERING HEALTHCARE

In many parts of the world hospitals have none of the modern health equipment that is common in western countries. This is partly because it is expensive, but also because electricity supplies are often unreliable, while trained staff who can read the complex displays may not be available. Now, Freeplay Energy, the company which developed the wind-up radio, is planning to introduce a range of medical equipment which can be used in those areas. All the machines will be of simple, robust design which will either use solar power or foot pedals, making expensive battery replacement unnecessary. Prototypes are currently on trial in South African hospitals, where their performance can be compared with more sophisticated machines.

4. Underline the key points in the following text.

THE SIXTH WAVE?

Lord May, the president of the Royal Society, has claimed that the world is facing a wave of extinctions similar to the five mass extinctions of past ages. He calculates that the current rate of extinction is between 100 and 1,000 times faster than the historical average. The cause of previous extinctions, such as the one which killed the dinosaurs, is uncertain, but was probably an external event such as collision with a comet.

However, the present situation is caused by human consumption of plants, which has resulted in a steady increase in agriculture and a consequent reduction in habitat for animals. Although many people are still hungry, food production has increased by 100% since 1965.

Lord May also pointed out that it was very difficult to make accurate estimates as nobody knew how many species of animals lived on the planet. So far 1.5 million species had been named, but the true figure might be as high as 100 million. Our ignorance of this made it almost impossible to work out the actual rate of extinction. However, the use of intelligent guesses suggests that losses over the past century were comparable with the extinctions of earlier periods, evidence of which is found in the fossil record.

5. When preparing to write an essay you may be concerned with only one aspect of a text, so that your key points relate only to the topic you are examining.

BOTTLED WATER UNDER ATTACK

The Water Companies Association (WCA) has claimed that bottled water costs 700 times more than tap water, but is often of inferior quality. The chief executive of the WCA pointed out that although bottled water advertising often associated the product with sport and health there was no truth in this link. The reality, she said, was that the packaging of bottled water was environmentally damaging, since millions of empty bottles had to be disposed of in rubbish tips. 2% of samples of bottled water failed a purity test conducted by the Drinking Water Inspectorate, while only 0.3% of tap water samples failed the same test. Labels on bottled water often referred to 'spring' and 'natural water', which were meaningless phrases. In addition, bottled water was imported from as far as Korea and Kenya, which was a waste of resources. These criticisms, however, were rejected by the British Soft Drinks Association, which argued that bottled water was a successful business founded on giving the customers choice, quality and convenience.

NEW LIGHT ON THE PLAGUE

The plague, which first struck Europe in the sixth century, was one of the great disasters of history. In the fourteenth century it became the Black Death, when it may have killed one-third of the entire population. The microbe that causes the disease lives on rats, and is passed on to humans by the bite of a flea. It still survives today, though outbreaks are less deadly: the World Health Organization receives reports of 3,000 cases annually. Scientists believe that the microbe was originally a stomach infection, but evolved into a more lethal disease about 1,500 years ago.

Now the genetic code of the plague bacterium has been 'read' by scientists; a total of 465 million 'letters' of DNA. They believe that this will help in the development of vaccines for the plague, one of which has begun clinical trials. In parts of Africa drug-resistant strains of the disease have evolved, which gives added importance to the work, as does the threat that the plague might be used as an agent of bacteriological warfare.

PICTURE PASSWORDS?

In computing, passwords are commonly used to limit access to official users. Yet the widespread use of passwords has serious drawbacks. Office workers now have to remember an average of twelve system passwords. In theory they should use different passwords for each site, but in reality these would be impossible to remember, so many people use the same password for all. An additional problem is that the majority use simple words such as hello, or names of family members, instead of more secure combinations of numbers and letters, such as 6ANV76Y. This permits computer hackers to download dictionaries, which will quickly find the word and allow them access.

When system users forget their passwords there is extra expense in supplying new ones, while if people are forced to change passwords frequently they often write them down, making systems even less secure. Therefore, it is clear that the idea of passwords, which have been used as security devices for thousands of years, may need rethinking.

One possible alternative has been developed by the American firm Real User, and is called Passfaces. In order to access the system a worker has to select a series of photographs of faces from a randomly generated sequence. If the pictures are selected in the correct order access is granted. This concept depends on the human ability to recognise and remember a huge number of different faces, and the advantage is that such a sequence cannot be told to anyone or written down, so is more secure. It is claimed that the picture sequence, which uses photographs of university students, is easier to remember than passwords, and it has now been adopted for the United States Senate.

MALARIA FIGHTS BACK

Drug-resistant strains of malaria, already one of the world's major killers, are steadily spreading across the globe. The deadly strains have established themselves in South-East Asia and South America, and have recently begun to spread across India and Africa. Formerly under control in many areas, the disease now threatens two billion people living in more than 100 countries. Estimates suggest that there are now more than 350 million cases of malaria a year – a total four times the level of the early 1970s. In Africa alone the disease kills one million children each year.

Several factors are responsible for this disturbing development. Spreading world poverty has deprived nations of funds for sanitation, so that many health projects have been stopped, while increased movements of migrant workers and tourists have carried infections more rapidly from one country to another. At the same time, the overuse of drugs, especially antibiotics, has led to the establishment of resistant strains of diseases.

As well as this, hopes that genetic engineers might soon develop the world's first malaria vaccine, a long-sought goal, have been questioned recently by several scientists. 'There are so many strains of malaria parasite,' said one scientist, 'and each is able to alter its chemical surface and trick its way past the body's defences. We'd need a remarkable vaccine to cope with that. However, a malaria vaccine is now undergoing human trials and may be available for use if proved successful.'

6. You are preparing to write an essay on 'The impact of climate on history'. The text below is taken from page 221 of a book called Volcanic Disasters by E. B. Pitnam, published in 1993. Underline the relevant points and make notes.

One of the greatest explosions in modern history occurred in 1815, when an Indonesian volcano called Mt. Tambora blew up. The eruption involved about 100 cubic kilometres of material being blown into the sky, with huge loss of life both on land and sea. Large quantities of volcanic dust were ejected into the atmosphere, and this dust gradually spread around the world, causing alarming events on the other side of the world.

In New England in north-eastern USA farmers were hit by bitterly cold weather in June and July 1816. Much of the harvest was lost due to repeated waves of frost and snow in the middle of summer. The same pattern was recorded in Europe, where agriculture was still suffering the effects of the Napoleonic Wars. In France wheat prices reached their highest point of the century in 1817.

As European demand for food rose, prices doubled in America. Although some profited from the shortages, others were driven to emigrate into the unexplored lands to the west. Numbers leaving Vermont, for example, increased by 100% between 1816 and 1817.

1.8 Paraphrasing

Paraphrasing involves changing a text so that it is quite different from the source, while retaining the meaning. This skill is important in several areas of academic work, but this unit focuses on using paraphrasing in note-making and summary writing. Effective paraphrasing is vital in academic writing to avoid the risk of plagiarism.

1. Although paraphrasing techniques are used in summary writing, paraphrasing does not aim to shorten the length of a text, merely to restate it.

For example:

Evidence of a lost civilisation has been found off the coast of China could be paraphrased:

Remains of an ancient society have been discovered in the sea near China

Ancient Egypt collapsed in about 2180 BC. Studies conducted of the mud from the River Nile showed that at this time the mountainous regions which feed the Nile suffered from a prolonged drought. This would have had a devastating effect on the ability of Egyptian society to feed itself.

- a) The sudden ending of Egyptian civilisation over 4,000 years ago was probably caused by changes in the weather in the region to the south. Without the regular river flooding there would not have been enough food.
 - b) Research into deposits of the Egyptian Nile indicate that a long dry period in the mountains at the river's source may have led to a lack of water for irrigation around 2180 BC, which was when the collapse of Egyptian society began.

FOUR WHEELS GOOD

The growth of the car industry parallels the development of modern capitalism. It began in France and Germany, but took off in the United States. There Henry Ford adapted the moving production line from the Chicago meat industry to motor manufacturing, thus inventing mass production. In the 1920s Alfred Sloan's management theories helped General Motors to become the world's dominant car company. After the Second World War the industry developed 'planned obsolescence', whereby frequent model changes encouraged customers to buy new cars more often than they needed to. Later, from the 1970s, environmentalists began to criticise the industry for producing inefficient models which used too much fuel, contributing to global warming. At this time, trades unions became increasingly militant in defence of their members' jobs. Today the industry owns some of the strongest brands in the world. However, many major car companies struggle with stagnant markets and falling profits.

Before the last century no humans had visited Antarctica, and even today the vast continent has a winter population of fewer than 200 people. However, a recent report from a New Zealand government agency outlines the scale of the pollution problem in the ice and snow. Although untouched compared with other regions in the world, the bitter cold of Antarctica means that the normal process of decay is prevented. As a result some research stations are surrounded by the rubbish of nearly 60 years' operations.

Despite popular belief, the polar continent is really a desert, with less precipitation than the Sahara. In the past, snowfall slowly covered the waste left behind, like beer cans or dead ponies, but now, possibly due to global warming, the ice is thinning and these are being exposed. Over 10 years ago the countries using Antarctica agreed a treaty on waste disposal, under which everything is to be taken home, and this is slowly improving the situation. However, the scientists do not want everything removed. The remains of very early expeditions at the beginning of the twentieth century have acquired historical value and will be preserved.

1.9 Summary Writing

Making summaries is a common activity in everyday life. If a friend asks you about a book you are reading, you do not tell her about everything in the book. Instead, you make a summary of the most interesting and important aspects. The same principle applies to summarising in academic work.

1. Choose three of the topics below and write summaries in no more than twelve words each.

Example:

Birmingham – Birmingham is a large industrial city in the English west midlands.

- a) Your home town
- b) Bill Gates
- c) Your academic subject
- d) The last book you read
- e) A film you saw recently

Look at the summaries you have written above. What are the features of a successful summary?

3. In essay writing students often have to summarise part of a book or journal article.

The summary may be just one or two sentences, to explain the main idea of the article, and perhaps compare it with another summarised text, or it might be necessary to include much more detail. In other words, a summary can range from 1–2% of the original to more than 50%: summarising is a flexible tool.

At first students need to follow a series of steps to summarise successfully. With practice the number of steps may be reduced, as the process becomes more automatic.

Indian researchers are trying to find out if there is any truth in old sayings which claim to predict the weather. In Gujarat farmers have the choice of planting either peanuts, which are more profitable in wet years, or castor, which does better in drier conditions. The difference depends on the timing of the monsoon rains, which can arrive at any time between the beginning and the middle of June. Farmers, however, have to decide what seeds to sow in April or May.

There is a local saying, at least a thousand years old, which claims that the monsoon starts 45 days after the flowering of a common tree, Cassia fistula. Dr Kanani, an agronomist from Gujarat Agricultural University, has been studying the relationship since 1996, and has found that the tree does successfully predict the approximate date of the monsoon's arrival.

9. Summarise the following article in about 75 words.

South Korea is planning to move its capital from Seoul to a new site in the middle of the country. Although Seoul has been the capital since the fourteenth century, the city of over 20 million is now very crowded, and also close to the hostile armies of North Korea. The new capital is planned to cost $45 billion, with construction finishing by 2012.

There is, however, strong opposition to the project, since similar schemes in other countries have taken far longer and cost much more than originally planned. Australia, for example, took over 70 years to finish building Canberra, while Nigeria has never completed its planned new capital, Abuja. Both Brazil and Malaysia have found that the building of new capitals (Brasilia and Putrajaya) can sharply increase the national burden of debt. Even if the government does eventually move to the new capital, it is unlikely that South Korea's main businesses will follow it, so Seoul will probably continue to be the country's principal city.

1.10 Combining Sources

Most essays require the writer to read more than one book or article. Your essay should include a summary of the views of the different sources you have studied. In some cases the contrast between the ideas of different writers may be the focus of the essay. This unit examines ways of presenting such varying views.

2. Below are two sources used for an essay titled 'Should genetically modified (GM) foods have a role in future agriculture?'

Read the sources first, then the essay extract.

Source A

Genetic modification (GM) is the most recent application of biotechnology to food, which can also be called genetic engineering or genetic manipulation. The phrase 'genetically modified organisms' or GMOs is used frequently in the scientific literature to describe plants and animals which have had DNA introduced into them by means other than the 'natural' process of an egg and a sperm.

New species have always evolved through natural selection by means of random genetic variation. Early farmers used this natural variation to selectively breed wild animals, plants and even micro-organisms such as yogurt cultures and yeasts. They produced domesticated variants better suited to the needs of humans, long before the scientific basis for the process was understood. Despite this long history of careful improvement, such procedures are now labelled 'interfering with nature'.

Source B

Genetic modification (GM) is in fact far more than a mere development of selective breeding techniques. Combining genetic material from species that cannot breed naturally is an interference in areas which may be highly dangerous. The consequences of this kind of manipulation cannot be foreseen.

It seems undeniable that these processes may lead to major benefits in food production and the environment. Furthermore, there is no doubt that some medical advances may have saved millions of lives. However, this level of technology can contain a strong element of risk.

Our ignorance of the long-term effects of releasing GM plants or even animals into the environment means that this step should only be taken after very careful consideration.

Essay extract

It has been claimed that GM technology is no different from breeding techniques which have been practised by man for thousands of years. Source A states that this process is similar to natural selection and remarks: 'such procedures are now labelled "interfering with nature"'. On the other hand Source B considers that, although GM technology could bring considerable benefits in medicine and agriculture, it is quite different to traditional processes of selection. He believes that crossing the species barrier is a dangerous step and that there is insufficient knowledge of the long-term results of such developments.

4. You are preparing to write an essay titled 'The social effects of tourism in developing countries'.

Read the sources and then complete the paragraph comparing their views, as in the example above.

Source C

When countries begin to provide facilities for mass tourism, such as hotels and leisure complexes, there is an immediate demand for labour. Work is created for cleaners, waiters, gardeners and drivers on a scale which may significantly boost the local economy. Such work may provide opportunities to learn valuable new skills. For many, these semi-skilled jobs provide an attractive alternative to subsistence agriculture or fishing, while at the same time the tax revenues from their earnings increase the national income.

One inevitable feature of tourism's growth is the creation of badly-paid, seasonal jobs in holiday resorts. Much of this work combines insecurity with long hours of work in poor conditions. In Thailand, for example, there are cases of hotel maids working 15-hour days for less than $4. Moreover, the combination of wealthy tourists being served by impoverished workers is likely to increase social tensions in these areas. Another risk is that natural or human disasters such as wars and earthquakes may drive visitors away without warning, leaving tens of thousands unemployed.

In defence of the tourist industry, it has been claimed that the development of tourism played a major part in helping to modernise parts of Franco's Spain in the 1960s. The presence of easy-going, affluent visitors apparently encouraged locals to learn new skills and open new businesses. Despite this positive interpretation, many examples could be presented where the arrival of rich and idle tourists has been an encouragement for crime, prostitution and other less desirable aspects of the modern economy. Much seems to depend on the economic alternatives offered by the society, and of course the scale of tourist arrivals.

It has been argued that tourism can have a very positive social influence on a developing country. Source C claims that

1.11 Planning Essays

Outline planning was examined in Unit 1.3. Planning gives essays a coherent structure and, most importantly, helps to ensure that they answer the question set. Although all essays need planning, they are written in two different situations: as coursework, and in exams. Clearly, under the time pressure of an exam, planning is more hurried, but can also be more critical. This unit looks first at planning in exams, and then for coursework.

2.6 Discussion

1. In the case of essays written in exams, it is best to begin planning by analysing the title and then writing down any ideas that seem relevant. This process is called 'brainstorming', and at first ideas are collected in any order.

Read the title below and add more ideas to the list.

Outline the development of the modern tourist industry.

- development of passenger jet aircraft in late 1950s
- package holidays became popular in 1960s
- increased leisure time in developed countries

2. Having assembled your ideas, it is then necessary to find a suitable framework for the essay. A structure may be suggested by the title of the essay. There are a number of common structures used in essay writing.

Which one would be most suitable for the title above?

- a) Time – usually from the past to the present or future, as narrative.
- b) Comparison – two or more topics are examined and compared, one after the other.
- c) For and against – the advantages and disadvantages of two systems are discussed.

3. Complete the plan using ideas from (1).

Outline the development of the modern tourist industry.

- a) Introduction: Current situation: growing demand/current problems, e.g. pollution
- b) Main body:
 - i) mass tourism began in 1960s with development of jet aircraft
 - ii)

- iii)
- iv)
- c) Conclusion:

4. Decide which of the three structures in (2) would be most suitable for the following titles.
- a) Prisons make criminals worse, and should be abolished – discuss.
 - b) In the UK, radio is gaining audience while TV is losing viewers. Consider possible reasons.
 - c) Trace the development of mass production and evaluate its main benefits.
 - d) ‘Examinations can never be fair.’ To what extent is this true?
 - e) The internet will make books redundant in twenty years – discuss.

5. Study the title below and the ideas collected for the essay. Add to the list if possible. Then choose a suitable framework and complete the plan below.

Compare the effects of advertising on TV with advertising in newspapers. What are the main differences? Are there any similarities?

TV adverts more lively, dynamic newspaper adverts can be targeted at a special market, e.g. local

TV advertising very expensive (to make and show)

many people video TV and fast forward adverts newspaper adverts can be prepared more quickly

TV adverts can reach a wider audience

- a) Introduction: role of newspapers and TV in society today
- b) Main body:

- iii)
- iv)
- c) Conclusion:

6. Choose one of the titles below and note at least six ideas that might be used in the essay. Then select a suitable framework and write a plan.

- a) In 20 years' time most learning will be on-line: the internet will replace the classroom – discuss.
- b) Describe the education system in your country and suggest how it could be improved.

Ideas Plan

7. In the case of longer essays, written as coursework, planning should be more detailed. It will normally be a two-stage process:

- a) before reading: using the title to develop an outline structure
- b) after reading: modifying the outline and adding detail

Study the notes below. Use them to write a plan for the title.

Title: Student numbers in higher education are rising in most countries. Is it desirable to keep increasing the numbers of young people who take a degree?

- a) In 1985 12% of young people went to university in the UK. Now the figure is over 30%. Similar growth has been experienced in many countries, developed and developing.

- b) Recent research (Jackson et al.) shows that employers are looking for personal skills rather than educational qualifications.
- c) The average student in Britain now leaves university with debts of £15,000.
- d) University education may help students from poorer families to move into a higher social position.
- e) Modern economies are based on knowledge. Therefore, every country needs to educate its workforce as highly as possible to compete with other economies.
- f) Because increasing numbers of young people are gaining a first degree, their degrees are worth less. It is now necessary to have a second degree to compete in the labour market.
- g) As student numbers rise, standards fall. Classrooms become more crowded, and overworked teachers are less able to give students personal attention.

1.12 Organising Paragraphs

Paragraphs are the basic building blocks of texts. Well-organised paragraphs not only help readers understand the argument, they also help writers to structure their ideas effectively.

1. Read the following paragraph.

The way we use banks is currently changing. This is partly because of the introduction of new technology in the last ten years. The personal computer and the internet, for instance, allow customers to view their accounts at home and perform operations such as moving money between accounts. At the same time banks are being reorganised in ways that affect both customers and staff. In the past five years over 3,000 bank branches have closed in Britain. The banks have discovered that staffing call centres is cheaper than running a branch network.

The structure of the paragraph is:

1. topic sentence	The way we use banks . . .
2. reason	This is partly because . . .
3. example	The personal computer . . .
4. information	At the same time banks . . .
5. information	In the past five years . . .
6. reason	The banks have discovered . . .

 - c) Other components vary according to the nature of the topic. Introductory paragraphs often contain definitions, while descriptive paragraphs include a lot of information. Other sentences give examples and offer reasons and restatements.
3. Read and analyse the following paragraph.

In recent years all British universities have adopted the semester system. A semester is a period of time which lasts for half the academic year. Semester 1, for example, starts in September and finishes in January. Previously the academic year had been divided into three terms: autumn, winter and spring. Most courses consist of modules which last for one semester, and exams are held at the end of each. Britain began using semesters to make it easier for international students to move from one country to another.

1.13 Organising the Main Body

This and the next two units deal with the organisation of the main body, the introduction and the conclusion. In the case of longer assignments it is often better to write the main body before the introduction. With shorter essays, for example in exams, this is impractical, and the introduction has to be written first.

Match the examples of plans for main bodies below to the structures above.

- a) Prisons make criminals worse, and should be abolished – discuss.

Select a suitable structure from (1) and reorganise the notes below in the best order.

Lowering the minimum school leaving age to 14 would allow teachers to focus on teaching the students who wanted to be in school – discuss.

3. Longer essays may include the following sections:

Literature review – a summary of the main authorities on this topic

Experimental set-up – a technical description of the organisation of an experiment

Methods – how the research was carried out

Findings/results – what was discovered by the research/ experiment

Case study – a description of an example of the topic being researched

5. Complete the following extract from an essay on 'British weather' with suitable phrases.

The British are famous all over the world for their obsession with the weather, but in fact the reality is more complex than is often believed. This essay sets out to examine some of the principal influences on the weather of the British Isles.

. is the geographical position of Britain, situated on the extreme western edge of the European continent. This means that a variety of weather types can dominate the country. the Atlantic Ocean can produce warm wet winds, especially in winter. the land mass of Europe can create anticyclonic weather, hot in summer and cold in winter. the polar region to the north can generate cold winds at most seasons of the year.

. variations within Britain, there are significant differences between regions. the south of England can be much warmer than the north of Scotland, especially in winter. the west of Britain is usually much wetter than the east. even in the same district, hilly areas will be cooler and wetter than the lowlands.

. is seasonal change, which in Britain is less distinct than in many countries. the Atlantic moderates extreme types of weather, and the weather pattern can change radically from year to year. As a result warm days in winter and chilly summer winds frequently surprise visitors to this country.

1.14 Introductions

An introduction is crucial, not just for what it says about the topic, but for what it tells the reader about the writer's style and approach. Unless you can introduce the subject clearly the reader may not wish to continue.

1. What is the purpose of the introduction to an essay? Choose from the items below:
 - a) to define some of the terms in the title
 - b) to give your opinion of the subject
 - c) to show that you have read some research on the subject
 - d) to show that the subject is worth writing about
 - e) to explain which areas of the subject you will deal with
 - f) to get the reader's attention with a provocative idea
 - g) to show how you intend to organise your essay
2. Study the extracts from introductions below, and decide which of the functions in the box they fulfil.

- i) explain starting point for research
- ii) state aims/goals
- iii) refer to recent research in same area
- iv) give results of research

- vi) concede limitations

- a) In many companies, the knowledge of most employees remains untapped for solving problems and generating new ideas.
- b) This paper positions call centres at the core of the mix of technologies public administration can use to innovate e-commerce.
- c) In fact, this is one of our main findings based on an extended sample period up to 1998.

- a) Definitions of any terms in the title that are unclear
 - b) Some background information
 - c) Reference to other writers who have discussed this topic
 - d) Your purpose in writing and the importance of the subject

Discuss the Impact of Privatisation on the British Economy.

Privatisation is the process of transferring certain industries from state control to the private sector, which began in Britain in 1981 with British Telecom . . .

- b) Background information helps to give a context for your essay.
- In recent years the privatisation of state owned businesses, especially monopoly utilities such as electricity and telecoms, has become widespread in both developed and developing nations.
- c) It is important to show that you are familiar with current research. This can be demonstrated using phrases such as:
- A number of researchers have examined this issue, notably . . .
- Various investigations have explored the subject, especially . . .
- d) You must show the importance of the topic. This can be either in the academic world, or as a contemporary issue of wider relevance.

As privatisation is increasingly seen as a remedy for economic ills in many other countries, it is worth examining its impact in Britain, which was a pioneer in this process.

- e) As you are only writing an essay, not a book, it is obviously not possible to deal with all aspects of your subject. Therefore you need to explain what limits you are setting on the discussion, and possibly give reasons for this.

Only privatisations completed between 1981–95 will be dealt with, as it is too soon to assess the impact of later developments.

- f) For your own benefit, as well as the reader's, it is useful to outline how the essay will be organised.

An assessment will first be made of the performance of the privatised industries themselves, on an individual basis, and then the performance of the economy as a whole will be examined.

Definition:	Higher education (HE) = university education
Background:	Increasing demand for HE worldwide puts pressure on national budgets > many states seek to shift costs to students
Relevance:	In most countries degree = key to better jobs and opportunities
Discussion points:	If students have to pay more of cost, discriminates against poorer families Is it fair for all taxpayers to support students? How to keep HE open to able students from all backgrounds?

6. Write an introduction to an essay on one of the following titles, or choose a subject from your own discipline.
- Compare the urbanisation process in the First and the Third Worlds.
 - Assess the importance of public transport in the modern city.
 - 'Lawyers are inflating the cost of medicine' – discuss.
 - To what extent is a democratic system necessary for economic development?

1.15 Conclusions

There is usually a link between the starting point, i.e. the title, and the conclusion. If the title is asking a question the answer should be contained in the conclusion. The reader may look at the conclusion first to get a summary of the main arguments or points.

1. Not every academic essay has a conclusion. In some cases it may be linked to the discussion section, or it may be called 'concluding remarks', or 'summary'. However, in most cases it is helpful for the reader to have a section which (quite briefly) looks back at what has been said and makes some comments about the main part.

Read the following extracts from conclusions and match them with the list of functions in the box.

- i) comparisons with other studies
- ii) summary of main body
- iii) limitations of research
- iv) suggestions for further research
- v) practical implications and proposals

- g) To be more precise, there was a positive relation between tolerant and patient problem solving and all four measures of adjustment: general, interaction, work and subjective well-being.

h) To empirically test this conjecture, we need more cross-national replication of this research.

2. Compare the following conclusions to two essays on 'Public transport in a modern economy'. Complete the table to show the main differences between them.

- a) As has been shown, public transport is likely to play an important role in the future. Despite possible changes in patterns of work and leisure, it seems likely that mass transport systems will remain necessary for the efficient movement of people. What is not clear is how such transport systems should be funded. Various schemes have been discussed, but the most effective model will probably contain some element of public funding. Market forces alone are unlikely to provide a satisfactory solution. This is in broad agreement with the views of most other recent commentators, notably Tilic (1998) and Vardy (2002).
- b) In such a brief study it is hard to draw definite conclusions about the future shape of public transport. In addition space has not permitted an examination of the situation in Asia, where significant growth of public transport has taken place. The main areas of debate have been outlined, but much more research is needed before firm conclusions can be drawn. Whether public transport flourishes or deteriorates in future is still unclear, though further studies, especially in the field of public/private partnerships, may eventually suggest an answer.

students do not have to travel to university

b) Reasons why classroom based education remains popular:

students can be part of group; receive support and advice; learn from colleagues students have face-to-face contact with a teacher is seen as traditional and effective

c) Discussion

can a solitary student in front of a computer enjoy the same learning experience as a member of a class?

pressure of numbers in universities makes more on-line education likely is internet learning really a new method of education? Distance learning has been popular for many years (e.g. Open University)

1.16 Rewriting and Proof-reading

When you have finished the conclusion it may be tempting to hand in your work immediately. However, it is almost certain that it can be improved by being revised. With longer assignments, it may be worth asking a classmate to read your work and make criticisms. Proof-reading is a vital final step, which can prevent confusion or misunderstanding due to simple errors. Computer programs that check spelling will not detect other common types of mistakes.

Rewriting

1. After finishing the first draft of an essay you should, if you have time, wait for a while and then re-read it, asking the following questions.
 - a) How well does this answer the question in the title?
 - b) Have I forgotten any points which would strengthen the development?
 - c) Is it clearly structured and well linked together?

- 2.4 Comparison
- 4.5 Comparison Essay

It is said that there are large differences in the teaching methods between British universities and Japanese ones. Courses in British universities consist mainly of lectures, discussions, presentations and tutorials and students study specifically their major subject. On the other hand, Japanese universities normally only have lectures in the first two years and students have to study a wide range of subjects in addition to their major. The aim of this essay is to compare and analyse each system.

In British universities, students need a more active attitude in their study than Japanese students. They need to prepare for presentations and discussions. This is useful for learning because they take much time for study outside the classroom and as they become familiar with their subjects they will become more interested in them.

In Japan, students' attitude is amazingly passive and they study only just before exams.

The other difference between British universities and Japanese ones is, as mentioned above, British students concentrate on their major subject and gain specific knowledge about it. Japanese students, however, gain wider knowledge by studying a few other subjects in addition to their major. This system gives students apparently much knowledge but they cannot study their major deeply and their knowledge is wide-ranging but not useful.

In conclusion, British teaching methods give students more chance to know the subject thoroughly compared to Japanese teaching methods, but Japanese methods are suitable for students who are eager to gain a wide range of knowledge and like to study on their own. It is hard to say which is better, it depends on students.

3. A careful re-reading of the essay would suggest the following points.

- a) The essay only partly answers the title. It looks at university life from a student's position, but does not really deal with the 'system' as a whole. The last line of the conclusion discusses a question not asked in the title.
- b) To deal with the subject more fully the writer needs to examine topics such as length of courses, funding of students and admission procedures. If there is not space to discuss these in detail they must be at least mentioned, to show that the writer is aware that they are central to the subject.
- c) The introduction needs to be more general. It goes straight to a comparison of teaching methods. This could be in the main body. Otherwise the essay is well organised and quite logical.

7. Proof-reading a longer text is more difficult. The following is an extract from an essay comparing university education in Taiwan and the UK.

Correct any errors you find.

There are many similaries to the UK and Taiwan, for example course fees, assessment and so on. Firstly, both UK universities and Taiwan universities charge fees from students, but course fees in the UK is as expensive as that in Taiwan. In addition, teaching methods are very similar to both of countries. Students should attend lectures and seminars. Moreover, they have the same system to assess students, which are examed at the end of semester. Nevertheless, there are three main differences: how students can entry a university and how much percentage of students are in higher education. Students in higher education in Taiwan are twice more than in the UK

2. Elements of Writing

Student Introduction

The Elements of Writing are the various skills that are needed for most types of academic writing, whether it is a short report, a long essay or a dissertation. Many essays, for instance, begin by defining a term in the title (unit 2.5 Definitions), then make some generalisations about the subject (unit 2.8 Generalisations) before going on to give examples of the main areas the writer wishes to examine (unit 2.7 Examples). Throughout the essay the writer needs to provide references to sources used (unit 2.11 References and Quotations) and to employ an appropriate academic style (unit 2.13 Style). Many academic subjects also require discussion of statistics (unit 2.9 Numbers), and graphs and charts (unit 2.16 Visual Information).

In the case of unit 2.4 Comparison and unit 2.6 Discussion, students should note that the comparison or discussion might apply to the overall pattern of the essay or to just one section. It is common, for instance, for longer essays to have a discussion section before the conclusion.

There is no fixed order for working on the units in Elements of Writing. They are organised alphabetically for easy access, and most students will have their own priorities. As in Part 1, the cross-reference boxes provide links to other relevant units.

1. Study the organisation of the following paragraph:

Currently, roads are often congested, which is expensive in terms of delays. It is claimed that building more roads, or widening existing ones, would ease the congestion. But not only is the cost of such work high, but the construction process adds to the congestion, while the resulting extra road space may encourage extra traffic. Therefore constructing extra roads is unlikely to solve the problem, and other remedies, such as road pricing or greater use of public transport, should be examined.

a) Problem	Currently, roads are often congested, which is . . .
b) Solution A	It is claimed that building more roads, or widening . . .
c) Argument against solution A	But not only is the cost of such work high, but . . .
d) Solutions B and C	. . . other remedies, such as road pricing or greater use . . .

2. The same ideas could be presented to arrive at a different conclusion:

Currently, roads are often congested, which is expensive in terms of delays. It is claimed that building more roads is costly, increases congestion and will encourage extra traffic. This may be partly true, but the alternatives are equally problematic. Road pricing has many practical difficulties, while people are reluctant to use public transport. There is little alternative to a road building programme except increasing road chaos.

Problem	Currently, roads are often congested, which is . . .
Solution A	building more roads . . .
Arguments against solution A	It is claimed that building more roads is costly, increases . . .
Solutions B and C and arguments against	Road pricing has many practical difficulties, while people are . . .
Conclusion in favour of solution A	There is little alternative to a road building programme . . .

3. Analyse the following paragraph in a similar way:

Obesity is a growing problem in many countries. It can lead to various medical conditions which increase the demand for public health services. There is no clear agreement on the causes of the condition, although some doctors blame a sedentary lifestyle. This does not explain why only certain people suffer from the condition, while others are not affected. Another theory is that a high fat diet, linked to modern processed food, is to blame. Recent research shows that most obesity sufferers do eat this unhealthy diet.

4. Use the following points to build an argument in one paragraph:

- Topic: University expansion
- Problem: Demand for university places is growing, leading to overcrowding
- Solution A: Increase fees to reduce demand
- Argument against A: Unfair to poorer students
- Solution B: Government pays to expand universities
- Argument against B: Unfair to average taxpayer who would be subsidising the education of a minority who will earn high salaries
- Conclusion: Government subsidises poorer students

3.7 Conjunctions

2. It is also possible to use conjunctions which demonstrate cause and effect.

Cause	Effect
because (of)	so
since	therefore

Because it rained heavily, the flooding was severe.
(because + verb)

Owing to/due to the heavy rain the flooding was severe.
(conjunction + noun)

(also: Owing to it raining . . .)

It rained heavily for days, therefore the flooding was severe.

NB It is more common to use conjunctions to illustrate particular situations.

4. Use conjunctions to complete the following paragraph.

WHY WOMEN LIVE LONGER

Some British scientists now believe that women live longer than men a) T cells, a vital part of the immune system that protects the body from diseases. Previously, various theories have attempted to explain longer female life expectancy. Biologists claimed that women lived longer b) they need to bring up children. Others argued that men take more risks, c) they die earlier. But a team from Imperial College think that the difference may be d) women having better immune systems. Having studied a group of men and women they found that the body produces fewer T cells as it gets older, e) the ageing process. However, they admit that this may not be the only factor, and f) another research project may be conducted.

2.3 Cohesion

cross-reference

3.7 Conjunctions

1. Cohesion means linking phrases together so that the whole text is clear and readable. It is achieved by several methods, such as the use of conjunctions. Another is the linking of phrases and sentences with words like he, they and that which refer back to something mentioned before:

Jane Austen wrote six major novels in her short life. They deal with domestic drama in middle-class families.

Examples of reference words and phrases

Pronouns	he/she/it/they
Possessive pronouns	his/her/hers/their/theirs
Objective pronouns	her/him/them
Demonstrative pronouns	this/that/these/those
Other phrases	the former/the latter/the first/the second

2. Read the following paragraph and complete the table.

Jenkins (1987) has researched the life cycle of new businesses. He found that they have an average life of only 4.7 years. This is due to two main reasons; one economic and one social. The former appears to be a lack of capital, the latter a failure to carry out sufficient market research. Jenkins considers that together these account for approximately 70% of business failures.

Reference	Reference word/phrase
Jenkins	he

one economic one social
the former, the latter

3. Read the paragraph and complete the table below to show what the reference words (in italics) refer to.

There is little prospect of improvement in the standard of living of the villagers from their present low level without the support of electricity. Presently, the households can enjoy only a limited number of hours of illumination based on kerosene or diesel. These are not cheap and so are not affordable by a large majority of the rural masses. This restricts the range as well as the intensity of their activities severely. But even if supply of power from these sources is available more abundantly, there is the problem of adverse environmental effects of such use.

4. In the following paragraph, insert suitable reference words from the box below in the gaps.

Disposable razor blades were invented by Gillette at the beginning of the twentieth century. a) were a simple idea but at first b) found it very hard to sell c) d) was because nobody had marketed a throw-away product before. However, e) use of advertising to stimulate demand gradually increased sales and before long f) became a millionaire.

5. Complete these paragraphs with suitable reference words from the table in (1).

Albert had a serious character, and perhaps h) major achievement was to organise the Great Exhibition of 1851, the profits from which helped to build the Museum.

B) One group of commentators have little faith in the ability of food availability to improve child nutrition. a) arguments are supported by the fact that over two-thirds of malnourished children live in countries with food supplies adequate for b) populations' needs. c) point to problems of poverty and to non-food factors, such as children's health and the quality of d) care. e) belief is that both, but especially f) (which is increasing in many countries), play a more significant part in malnutrition than is often admitted.

2.4 Comparison

1. The two basic comparative forms are:

The Pacific Ocean is larger than the Atlantic.

His work is more interesting than hers.

a) -er is added to one-syllable adjectives (slow/slower) and two-syllable adjectives ending in -y (easy/easier).

b) more is used with words of two or more syllables.

careful/more careful quickly/more quickly

However, there are some two-syllable words that can use either form:

simple/simpler/more simple

2. Comparisons can be made more exact by using slightly, much, considerably, far or significantly before the comparative:

Dickens' novels are considerably longer than Austen's.

The new Mercedes is slightly more economical than the old model.

3. Study the table and complete the comparisons below.

b) Spanish letters are German letters.

c) British letters are French ones.

d) Letters in Germany are in America.

4. The form as as can be used to stress similarity:

It can also be used for quantitative comparison:

German letters are twice as expensive as American letters.

But not in combination with a noun:

Family cars are cheaper than sports cars. (not sports ones)

6. More/less, the most/the least (followed by adjective), the most/ the fewest (related to number)

2.5 Definitions

cross-reference

1.14 Introductions

1. In academic writing, definitions are normally needed in two situations:

In introductions, to clarify a word or phrase in the title.

More generally, to explain a word or phrase which may be either very technical (and so not in normal dictionaries), very recent, or with no widely agreed meaning.

Word	Category	Detail	Use
A lecture	is a formal talk	given to a large group,	often used for teaching.
An assignment	is a task	often given to students	for teaching or assessment.

2. Insert suitable category words in the following definitions.

- A barometer* is a scientific designed to measure atmospheric pressure.
- Kidneys* are that separate waste fluid from the blood.
- A multi-national company* is a business that operates in many countries.
- Reinforced concrete* is a building consisting of cement, sand and steel rods.
- Bullying* is a pattern of anti-social found in many schools.
- Recycling* is a in which materials are used again.
- A recession* is a of reduced economic activity.
- Post codes* are a for making mail delivery more efficient.

3. More complete definitions may be written by adding examples or extra information:

A mortgage is a type of loan (which is) used for buying property, in which the lender has the security of the property.

Complete and extend the following definitions.

- Distillation is a used to
- A psychiatrist is a who specialises in

- c) An MSc is a awarded on completion of
 - d) A trades union is a(n) which exists to protect
 - e) Malaria is a caused by
 - f) Wheat is a used for
4. Study the following examples and underline the term being defined.
- a) . . . the definition for a failed project . . . ranges from abandoned projects to projects that do not meet their full potential or simply have schedule overrun problems.
 - b) Development is a socioeconomic–technological process having the main objective of raising the standards of living of the people.
 - c) Electronic commerce is characterised by an absence of physical proximity between the buyer and seller in conducting the search, assessment and transaction stages of a transaction . . .
 - d) Bowlby (1982) suggested that attachment is an organised system whose goal is to make individuals feel safe and secure.
 - e) . . . the non-linear effect called ‘self-brightening’ in which large-amplitude waves decay more slowly than small-amplitude ones.

The examples above illustrate the variety of methods employed in definitions:

- (a) gives various examples which fall into the grouping the author wishes to examine.
- (b), (d) and (e) use category words: process, system, effect.
- (c) defines the term in a negative way (an absence).
- (d) quotes a definition from another writer.

5. When writing introductions, it is often helpful to define a term in the title, even when it may be in common use, to demonstrate that you have thought about it and that you have a clear idea what it means in your essay.

Title: Higher education should be free and open to all – discuss.

3.2 Academic Vocabulary

Higher education in Britain means university-level study for first or higher degrees, normally at the age of 18 or above.

 - b) The department store is a nineteenth-century creation which has no future in the twenty-first century – discuss.

 - c) The incidence of post-natal depression appears to be rising. What are the most effective methods of treating the condition?
6. Select several terms from your own subject area and write extensive definitions for them.

2.6 Discussion

cross-reference

4.6 Discussion Essay

1. Many essay titles require the writer to examine both sides of a case, and to conclude by coming down in favour of one side. These may be called 'discussion', 'for and against' or 'argument' essays. For example:

- a) School uniforms – a step forward or a step back? – discuss.
- b) Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of state control of industry.

In addition, longer essays often require students to assess the information and ideas they have collected in a discussion section before the conclusion.

Discussion vocabulary

advantage	disadvantage

1.13 Organising the Main Body

2. There are two basic outlines for a discussion essay:

- i) School uniforms?
 - a) advantages: reduce social inequality/encourage group identity/avoid choice
 - b) disadvantages: loss of individuality/expense/unfashionable
 - c) discussion: overall, benefits more valuable in most cases
- ii) School uniforms?
 - a) social: emphasises group values – diminishes individual choice
 - b) practical: expensive for poor families but easier to get dressed
 - c) discussion: overall, benefits more valuable in most cases

3. Choose one of the titles below and write down as many pros and cons in the box as possible. Then prepare a plan using one of the outlines above.

- a) Instead of going out to work, mothers should stay at home and look after their children until they are at least 5 – discuss.
- b) Fast food, which is spreading round the world and destroying national cultures, should be resisted. To what extent do you agree?

2.1 Argument

4. Presenting your case.

It is better to use impersonal phrases rather than 'I think':

It is widely believed that young children need to be with their mothers . . .

Most people consider that fast food is very convenient . . .

It is generally agreed that school uniforms develop a group identity . . .

It is probable/possible that fast food will become more acceptable . . .

This evidence suggests that most children benefit from nurseries . . .

However, if you want to present a minority point of view, you can use the following:

It can be argued that children benefit from a diet of hamburgers.

It has been suggested that school uniforms make children more rebellious.

Some people believe that nursery education damages children.

5. It is important to show that you are aware of counter-arguments.

These are the points made by people who oppose your position. Without these your argument will appear one-sided. In a discussion you can present these first, before stating your own views.

Study the example and write similar sentences about working mothers and fast food using ideas from (3).

Counter-argument	Your position
Although it has been suggested that school uniforms make children more rebellious,	it is generally agreed that uniforms develop a group identity.

 1.10 Combining Sources
 2.11 References and Quotations

6. Before giving your own opinion, it is necessary to show that you have read the relevant sources and have studied the evidence. Opinions without evidence have little value.

The following paragraph discusses the environmental effects of deforestation.

Lomborg (2001) claims that the danger of extinction of species has been exaggerated. He says that the number of species had been expected to decline dramatically within the next half century, but maintains that this is unlikely: ‘Species . . . seem more resilient than expected.’ He points out that in the eastern USA, although 98% of the original forests have been cleared, only one forest bird became extinct in the process. Against this, Brooks (2001) feels that Lomborg is ignoring the true rate of forest loss and the related extinction of species: ‘The ongoing wave of extinctions, due primarily to deforestation in the moist tropics, has been widely documented.’ It seems that Lomborg, as a statistician, is too dependent on optimistic data, and is ignoring the widespread concerns of wildlife experts.

The paragraph has the following structure:

Lomborg – summary + quotation
Brooks – summary + quotation
Writer’s comment on Lomborg + opinion

According to Lomborg (2001), air quality is improving in rich countries. He gives the example of London, where he claims that the air is cleaner now than it has been since 1585, thanks to decreases in smoke and sulphur dioxide. Brooks (2001), however, argues that Lomborg is ‘ignoring the more recent global rise in toxic contaminants, now found at high concentrations . . . even in the remote reaches of the Arctic.’ It appears that

10. Write an essay on this title, making use of phrases from (4) above.

2.7 Examples

1. When writing essays it is often better to support statements by giving examples. Compare the following:

- a) Many plants and animals are threatened by global warming.
- b) Many plants and animals are threatened by global warming. In southern Britain, for example, the beech tree may become extinct within 30 years.

The second sentence provides concrete details of a plant species, an area and a time scale to support the main statement.

2. Phrases for introducing examples include:

Many departments, for instance/for example engineering, now offer foundation courses.

(note use of commas)

A few courses, such as/e.g. MBA, require work experience.

Many universities, particularly/especially UK ones, ask overseas students for IELTS scores.

(note the focus)

Some subjects are heavily oversubscribed. A case in point is medicine.

(for single examples)

Use suitable example phrases to complete the following sentences.

- a) As the climate warms, wetland species frogs may find their habitat reduced.
- b) Some animals can migrate to cooler areas. are birds, which can move easily.
- c) Many slow-growing plants, trees , will find it difficult to move to wetter areas.
- d) Certain reptiles, snakes, may benefit from drier and warmer summers.
- e) Rising sea levels may bring some advantages expanding wetland areas.

3. Find a suitable example for each sentence.

Example: Various sectors in the economy are experiencing labour shortages.

2.12 Restatement and Repetition

5. Another small group of phrases is used when there is only one 'example'. This is a kind of restatement:

The world's biggest software company, i.e. Microsoft, is buying a share of the cable business.

in other words	namely	that is (to say)	i.e.	viz (in very formal English only)
----------------	--------	------------------	-------------	--

Add a suitable phrase to the following sentences, from the box below, to make them clearer.

- a) His mother's sister was a small but very remarkable woman.
- b) When the liquid reached boiling point the reaction began.
- c) It appears that Candlemas day was celebrated with large bonfires.
- d) The company's overheads doubled last year.

namely 140 degrees i.e. his aunt in other words, the fixed costs that is, February 2nd

2.8 Generalisations

1. In written work generalisations are very useful because they can be used to present complex ideas or data in a simple form which is easy to understand and remember:

Large companies can offer better career opportunities.

Language is an important means of communication.

Compare the statements on the data in the table below.

- 56.2% of British smokers are women.
- The majority of British smokers are women.

UK smokers by gender

Men	Women
43.8%	56.2%

The first sentence is more accurate, but the second, which contains a generalisation, is easier to understand. However, using generalisations does involve a loss of precision, so the writer must judge when they can be used safely, and when it is better to give the full data.

3.5 Caution

2. There are two ways of making a generalisation:

- Using the plural: Computers are useful machines.
- Using the singular + definite article: The computer is a useful machine. (less common/more formal)

It is better to avoid absolute phrases such as cats are cleverer than dogs. Instead use more cautious phrases such as cats tend to be cleverer than dogs or most cats are more intelligent than dogs.

Write generalisations on the following topics.

- child/noise Example: Children are often noisy.
- flowers/presents
- city/pollution
- fresh fruit/health
- television/important

3. Read the following text and underline the generalisations.

Li Pang is a Chinese student studying architecture in Manchester. He enjoys the style of teaching as well as the cosmopolitan lifestyle the city provides. Many international students attend British universities. Most welcome the chance to meet classmates from all over the world, and all are pleased to have the chance to improve their English. When he goes home to Shanghai, Li Pang will have a network of international contacts to support his future career.

4. Overgeneralising

This means making statements which are too simple or inaccurate. For example, using income figures from the table below, a writer might claim:

People were much richer in 1999 than 20 years earlier.

This ignores inflation over the period. It is more accurate to say:

Average incomes in 1999 were nearly four times higher than in 1979.

Changes in key economic indicators in the UK, 1979–1999

Britain	1979	1989	1999
Inflation rate	13.4%	7.8%	3.4%
Interest rate	12%	13.7%	5.5%
Unemployment	4.1%	6.1%	4.6%
Average income	£5,000	£11,700	£19,000
Average house price	£19,800	£61,500	£68,300

Each of the following contain overgeneralisation. Rewrite them more accurately.

- a) Between 1979 and 1999, the worst period for unemployment was 1989.
- b) Inflation fell steadily for 20 years after 1979.
- c) There was a dramatic rise in house prices in these two decades.
- d) Interest rates peaked in 1989.

5. Study the table below and complete the generalisations.

Regional population in 2000 and forecasts for 2100, with % over 60 years old

Region	2000	% over 60	2100	% over 60
N. America	314	16	454	40
W. Europe	456	20	392	45
S. Asia	1,367	7	1,958	35
S. America	515	8	934	33
N. Africa	173	6	333	32

- a) By 2100, nearly half the population of W. Europe may
- b) The population of N. Africa may
- c) S. Asia and S. America both have
- d) W. Europe is likely to experience a
- e) By 2100, all these regions may

6. Read the text on 'Dreams' and write five generalisations using the data.

A recent survey on dreams, completed by over 10,000 people, found that 68% of all dreams came into the 'anxiety' category. Being chased was the most common dream, recorded by 72%. Dreams about falling (which signify insecurity) are also very common, being recorded by 70%.

55% have dreamed about relatives and friends who have died. Many people believe that dreams can foretell the future, but only 42% have experienced this type. 28% of those surveyed have dreams about food, which seem to occur during periods of weight watching, but 23% have been pleased by dreams of finding money.

Example: Anxiety seems to be the cause of most dreams.

2.16 Visual Information

1. Discussing statistical data is a necessary part of much academic writing:

Approximately 1,800 children between the ages of 5 and 12 years were randomly selected . . .

Already 3% of the US working population (1.55 million) are employed in 70,000 centres . . .

The earth's atmosphere appears to be gaining 3.3 billion metric tons of carbon annually . . .

. . . but five winters in the twentieth century were more than 2.4°C colder than average.

Figures and numbers are both used to talk about statistical data in a general sense.

The figures in the report need to be read critically.

Digits are individual numbers. Both fractions ($\frac{1}{2}$) and decimals (0.975) may be used.

4,539 – a four-digit number

£225,000 – a six-figure salary (a number)

no final 's' on hundred/thousand/million:

Six million people live in the region.

but: Thousands died in the last outbreak of cholera.

2. Percentages are commonly used for expressing rates of change:

Overseas students in the university 2000–2003

2000	2001	2002	2003
200	300	600	1,000

Complete the following sentences about the table above with percentages.

- Between 2000 and 2001, the number of overseas students increased by%
 - The number increased by% the following year.
 - Between 2000 and 2003 there was a% increase.
3. Too many statistics can make texts harder to read. In some cases, where the actual number is unimportant, words or phrases may replace numbers to simplify the text:

Forty-three villages were cut off by the heavy snowstorm.

Dozens of villages were cut off by the heavy snowstorm.

The following words or phrases can be used to describe quantity.

Few students attended her lecture. (less than expected)

Several bodies have been discovered under the temple floor. (3–4)

Various attempts were made to explain the symbols. (3–6)

Dozens of politicians attended the opening ceremony. (30–60)

Scores of books are published every week. (50–100)

Rewrite the following sentences using one of the words or phrases above.

- a) Only four people responded to the questionnaire.
- b) They received nearly 100 applications for the post.
- c) She made five or six proposals to improve the team's performance.
- d) He found over fifty factual errors in the article.
- e) They made three or four drafts before writing the final report.

4. Study the following expressions, which are also used to simplify statistics.

one in three	a third/a quarter twice (2×)/three times as many	the majority/minority a tenfold increase	50%, a percentage to double/halve	on average/the average number the most/least	a small/large proportion

Rewrite each sentence in a simpler way, using one of the expressions above.

- a) Of the 415 people interviewed, 308 said that they supported the president.
 - b) Last year the number of students on the course was twenty-four, the year before it was twenty and this year it is twenty-two.
 - c) In 1965 a litre of petrol cost 10p, while the price is now 80p.
 - d) Out of eighteen students in the group, twelve were women.
 - e) The new type of train reduced the journey time to Madrid from 7 hours to 3 hours 20 minutes.
 - f) Fifteen of the students studied law, eight finance and three engineering.
 - g) The numbers applying to this department have risen from 350 last year to 525 this year.
5. Rewrite the following sentences to present the data in a simpler way.
- a) The population of the European part of the former Soviet Union is declining rapidly. It is forecast to fall by 18m to 220m in 2025, and to drop to 140m by 2100.
Example:
The population of the European part of the former Soviet Union is forecast to fall by nearly 10% by 2025, and by nearly 40% by the end of the century.
 - b) The numbers of visitors to the temples show a remarkable pattern. In 1998 just 40,000 made the journey, 83,000 in 1999 and 171,000 in 2000.

- c) More than 80% of British students complete their first degree course; in Italy the figure is 35%.

 - d) Tap water costs 0.07p per litre while bottled water, on average, costs 50p per litre.

 - e) Only 8% of the women surveyed believed that they had the same rights as men. A considerable 37% complained that they had far fewer rights.

 - f) Life expectancy for men in the UK rose from 49 to 74 during the twentieth century.

 - g) The same operation cost £1,850 at a hospital in Blackburn, £2,400 in Birmingham and £2,535 in London.

 - h) In 1086 about 15% of England was forested, compared with only 4.8% in 1870.

2.10 Opening Paragraphs

Cross-reference

- 1.14 Introductions
- 2.8 Generalisations

1. It is often difficult to begin writing an essay, but, especially in exams, hesitation can waste valuable time. The first few sentences need to be general but not vague, as they set the tone for the rest of the essay. The subject can be introduced by giving some background information:

In recent years the internet has become an important tool of academic research.

There is increasing interest in the use of wind power to produce electricity.

Time phrase	Topic	Development
In recent years	the internet	has become an important tool of academic research.
There is an increasing interest in	the use of wind power	to produce electricity.

These generalisations can be followed by further information or examples:

In recent years the internet has become an important tool of academic research. Students and teachers find it convenient, accessible and up to date.

There is increasing interest in the use of wind power to produce electricity. In north Wales, for example, one wind farm generates enough power to light 100,000 homes. Wind power is a renewable resource which does not produce carbon dioxide.

2. Write two or three introductory sentences on one of the following topics.
 - a) Global warming
 - b) The spread of Aids
 - c) The future of the United Nations
 - d) Tourism

3. It is important to begin an essay with remarks that are general but also accurate and clear.

Decide which of the following are suitable (essay titles in brackets):

- a) (Do newspapers have a future?)

Newspapers are facing increased competition from other media such as television and the internet. Young people often prefer to get information from electronic sources, which can be updated more frequently.

- b) (Is public concern about crime justified?)

Crime is increasing everywhere, and this worries many people. Nobody can agree on a solution to the problem.

- c) (GM foods can feed the world – discuss.)

In the past twenty years genetically modified (GM) crops have become a source of major controversy. Both farmers and consumers are divided on questions of health and environmental safety.

- d) (Is quality being sacrificed for quantity in higher education?)

It can be seen that higher education (HE) is changing throughout the world, with more students wanting to enter universities. There are many possible reasons for these changes, but the results are the same.

4. Having provided some background, the writer should next mention the main areas which will be covered in the essay.

Do newspapers have a future?

Newspapers are facing increased competition from other media such as television and the internet. Young people often prefer to get information from electronic sources, which can be updated more frequently. As a result newspaper sales are declining in many countries. Yet printed news media have certain advantages, such as cheapness and flexibility. In order to survive they are likely to concentrate more on entertainment and comment. In this essay the strengths and weaknesses of newspapers will be examined first, and these will then be compared with their rivals.

5. Study the following essay titles. Choose two and write an opening paragraph for each in no more than five minutes per paragraph.
- a) Television can damage the development of children – discuss.
 - b) Mature students get better academic results than young students – discuss.
 - c) The greatest social change in the twentieth century was the movement of women out of the home and into the workforce. How true is this statement?

2.11 References and Quotations

cross-reference

1.2 Avoiding Plagiarism

1. A reference is an acknowledgement that you are making use of another writer's ideas or data in your writing:

As Donner (1997) pointed out, low inflation does not always lead to low interest rates.

There are three main reasons for giving references:

- a) To avoid the charge of plagiarism, which is using another person's ideas or research without acknowledgement.
- b) The reference can give more authority to your writing, as it shows you are familiar with other research on the topic.
- c) The reader can find the original source by using the reference section which will list the full publishing details of Donner's book:

Donner, F. (1997) Macroeconomics. Borchester: Borchester University Press

2. Decide which of the following need references.

- a) A mention of facts or figures from another writer
- b) An idea of your own
- c) Some data you have found from your own research
- d) A theory suggested by another researcher
- e) A quotation from a work by any author
- f) Something which is agreed to be common knowledge

3. In order to give references accurately it is important to use the following procedure:

- a) When reading and note-making, keep a careful record of the details of your sources. For a long piece of writing such as a dissertation a card index is useful.
- b) Find out which system of referencing is used in your subject area. You can do this by studying current textbooks and journals and checking departmental guidelines.
- c) Follow one of the methods illustrated below to give the reference.

4. a) Summary of a writer's ideas

Orwell (1940) pointed out that although Charles Dickens described eating large meals in many of his books, he never wrote about farming. He explains this contradiction in terms of Dickens' upbringing in London, remote from the countryside.

b) Quotation of a writer's words.

Orwell clearly highlighted this inconsistency in Dickens: 'It is not merely a coincidence that Dickens never writes about agriculture and writes endlessly about food. He was a Cockney, and London is the centre of the earth in rather the same sense that the belly is the centre of the body.' (Orwell, 1940: pp. 53–4)

c) Mixture of summary and quotation.

As Orwell (1940) noted, Dickens frequently described food but was uninterested in food production. He considered that this was because of the writer's background: 'He was a Cockney, and London is the centre of the earth.' (pp. 53–4)

5. Read the following extract from the same essay ('Charles Dickens' in Inside the Whale, Orwell, G., 1940: pp. 54–5)

What he does not noticeably write about, however, is work. In Dickens' novels anything in the nature of work happens off-stage. The only one of his heroes who has a plausible profession is David Copperfield, who is first a shorthand writer and then a novelist, like Dickens himself. With most of the others, the way they earn their living is very much in the background.

- a) Write a summary of the author's ideas, including a suitable reference.
- b) Introduce a quotation of the key part of the extract, again referring to the source.
- c) Combine (a) and (b), again acknowledging the source.

6. Referring verbs use both the present and the past tenses. It is probably best to use the present tense for recent sources or when you feel that the idea or data is still valid:

Rathbone (1997) demonstrates the limitations of video-conferencing.

Steinbeck (1965) explored a link between cancer and diet.

7. There are three main systems of reference in use in academic writing:

- a) The system illustrated above (the Harvard) is the most common. Note the following:

Hunter (1989) states . . . (date of publication in brackets when referring verb is used)

Cross-reference
3.22 Verbs of Reference

Women pose less security risk (Burke and Pollock, 1993)
(authors and date in brackets after summary)

Note that with quotations page numbers should also be given after the date. Details of the organisation of the reference section are given in (8) below.

- b) Numbers in brackets are inserted in the text for each source, and at the end of the chapter or article the references are listed in number order:

A survey of Fortune 500 companies found that over 70% have problems recruiting skilled staff (1). Some analysts argue that this could be as high as 90% (2).

1. Cuervo D. 1990, 'Whither Recruitment?' HR Journal 13, pp. 23–39.

2. Segall, N. 1996, Cross-cultural studies, Harper & Row, New York pp. 173–4.

- c) A third system uses footnotes:

In this system the references are listed at the bottom of the page:

²*Economist*, 13 January 1996, pp. 27–8.

NB A full reference section is required at the end of the article or book.

8. Organising the bibliography/references

Here is the reference section of an essay written by a business student.

Study the pattern of organisation and answer the following questions.

- a) How are the entries ordered?
- b) What is the difference between the information provided for
 - i) a book by one author
 - ii) a chapter in an edited book
 - iii) a source on the internet
 - iv) an article in a journal
- c) When are italics used?
- d) How are capital letters used in titles?
- e) How is a source with no given author listed?

Referencing is a complex subject and students are advised to seek specialist help, e.g. from a library, when referencing less usual subjects.

2.12 Restatement and Repetition

1. Restatement is used in academic writing to expand or explain:

- a) . . . individuals and employers express great creativity in arranging alternative transport, i.e. private buses arranged by employers or spontaneous car sharing . . .
- b) They claim that the milk contains more omega-3 fatty acids – the polyunsaturated fatty acids which are said to prevent heart disease.
- c) . . . the contribution of cognitive ability to university success may be higher in physics and music than in sociology and psychology. That is, success in psychology and sociology may require abilities and dispositions not included in the entrance examination.

In (a) and (b) the second part of the sentence explains what is meant by alternative transport and omega-3 fatty acids. In (c) the second sentence develops the first to make it clearer. Note that the restatements are introduced by i.e., a dash (–) or that is.

2. Add a suitable restatement from the box to the following:

- a) Higher fares for rail passengers are likely to cause a reduction in ticket sales.
- b) Two main methods of assessment are used in UK universities.
- c) 40% of the property is owned by 1% of the population.

– the cost of living is expected to increase sharply.

That is to say, the distribution of wealth is very unequal.

In other words, this may lead to fewer people travelling by train.

3. Repetition and redundancy suggest that the writer is not fully in control of the material. They give the impression that either he does not properly understand the language or he is trying to 'pad' the essay by repeating the same point:

University education in Spain is cheaper than university education in the UK.

Homelessness is a global problem in the whole world.

University education in Spain is cheaper than in the UK.

Homelessness is a global problem.

1.16 Rewriting and Proof-reading

4. Study the following examples of repetition and redundancy, from an essay comparing education in two countries. Underline the part that can be deleted.

- a) Every country has a unique structure for its education system, thus it differs from country to country.
- b) Similarly China, an ancient country, has expanded its higher education.
- c) There are two differences between the UK and China in terms of higher education. Firstly, the entrance system is different in the two countries.
- d) In Spain just only 40% of students can find a job.
- e) Students who graduate from secondary schools they can send application forms to many universities.
- f) Both UK universities and Chinese universities charge fees.
- g) This essay will compare HE systems in the UK and China. Firstly, there are similar assessment methods in the UK and China.

5. The following are common causes of repetition and redundancy.

Link each to one of the examples above.

- a) Repeating the same point in different words
- b) Unnecessary word – often preposition or pronoun
- c) Irrelevant comment
- d) Repetition of phrase

6. In the following text, remove all repetition and redundancy, rewriting where necessary.

FAST FOOD

Currently these days, fast food is growing in popularity. Fast food is a kind of food that people they can buy or cook quickly. This essay examines the advantages of fast food and the drawbacks of fast food. First above all, the fast food is usually tasty. Most of the people who work in offices are very busy, so that they do not have time to go to their homes for lunch. But the people who work in offices can eat tasty and delicious food in McDonald's restaurants, which are franchised in hundreds of countries. In addition, the second benefit of fast food is its cheapness. As it is produced in large quantities, this high volume means that the companies can keep costs down. As a result fast food is usually less expensive than a meal in a conventional restaurant.

2.13 Style

1. Study the style of this paragraph and underline any examples of poor style.

A lot of people think that the weather is getting worse. They say that this has been going on for quite a long time. I think that they are quite right. Research has shown that we now get storms etc all the time.

2. Academic writing attempts to be precise, semi-formal, impersonal and objective. This does not mean that pronouns like I and we are never used, but in general the focus is on presenting information as clearly and accurately as possible. In this way it differs from normal speech and writing, which is more personal and uses more lively idioms and phrases. Using these guidelines, the paragraph above can be analysed:

A lot of people think . . .	Imprecise – how many is ‘a lot’?
. . . the weather . . .	Imprecise – ‘weather’ is short term
. . . getting worse . . .	Informal
They say . . .	Use of pronoun informal
. . . going on . . .	Informal phrasal verb
. . . quite a long time.	Imprecise – how long is this?
I think . . .	Informal, personal phrase
Research . . .	Vague – whose research?
. . . we now get . . .	Informal
. . . storms etc . . .	Vague
. . . all the time.	Overgeneralised

The paragraph can be rewritten:

It is widely believed that the climate is deteriorating. It is claimed that this process has been continuing for nearly 100 years. This belief appears to be supported by McKinley (1997) who shows a 55% increase in the frequency of severe winter gales since 1905.

3. It is difficult to give rules for academic style which apply to all subject areas. When reading books and journals in your area you should note what is acceptable. You will probably meet exceptions to the points below as you read, but if you follow these guidelines you should be able to develop a suitable style of your own.

- a) Do not use idiomatic or colloquial vocabulary: dad, guy. Use standard English: father, man.
- b) Use vocabulary accurately. There is a difference between rule and law, or currency and money, which you are expected to know.

cross-reference

- 3.5 Caution
- 3.3 Adverbs
- 3.18 Verbs – Formality
- 3.20 Verbs – Passives

- c) Be as precise as possible when dealing with facts or figures. Avoid phrases such as about a hundred or hundreds of years ago. If it is necessary to estimate numbers use approximately rather than about.
- d) Conclusions should use tentative language. Avoid absolute statements such as education reduces crime. Instead use cautious phrases: may reduce crime or tends to reduce crime.
- e) Avoid adverbs that show your personal attitude: luckily, remarkably, surprisingly.
- f) Do not contract verb forms: don't, can't. Use the full form: do not, cannot.
- g) Although academic English tends to use the passive more than standard English, it should not be overused. Both have their place. Compare:
 - Manners (1995) claims that most companies perform worse when . . .
 - It is widely agreed that most companies perform worse when . . .In the first case, the focus is on the source, in the second on what companies do.
- h) Avoid the following:
 - like* for introducing examples. Use such as or for instance.
 - thing* and combinations nothing or something. Use factor, issue or topic.
 - lots of*. Use a significant/considerable number.
 - little/big*. Use small/large.
 - get* phrases such as get better/worse. Use improve and deteriorate.
 - good/bad* are simplistic. Use positive/negative, e.g. the changes had several positive aspects
- i) Do not use question forms such as What were the reasons for the decline in wool exports? Instead use statements: There were four main reasons for the decline . . .
- j) Avoid numbering sections of your text, except in certain reports. Use conjunctions and signposting expressions to introduce new sections (Turning to the question of taxation . . .).
- k) When writing lists, avoid using etc. or and so on. Insert and before the last item: The forests of the twelfth century consisted of oak, ash and lime.

- l) Avoid using two-word verbs such as go on or bring up if there is a suitable synonym. Use continue or raise.
4. In the following, first underline the examples of poor style and then rewrite them in a more suitable way:
- a) Lots of people think that the railways are getting worse.
 - b) Sadly, serious crime like murder is going up.
 - c) You can't always trust the numbers in that report.
 - d) The second thing is that most kids in that district will become criminals.
 - e) I think that there's a big risk of more strikes, disorder etc.
 - f) A few years ago they allowed women to vote.
 - g) Regrettably, the inflation in Russia led to increased poverty, illness and so on.
 - h) Some time soon they will find a vaccine for malaria.
 - i) What were the main causes of the American Revolution?
5. Rewrite the following paragraphs in better style.
- a) These days a lot of kids are starting school early. Years ago, they began at 5, but now it's normal to start at 4 or younger. Why is this? One thing is that mums need to get back to work. Is it good for the kids? Jenkins has studied this and says that early schooling causes social problems like stealing, drug-taking etc. I think he's right and we should pay mums to stay at home.

- b) Why are there so many jams on the roads these days? One thing is that public transport like trains, buses, etc. is so dear. A long time ago cars cost a lot but now, unfortunately, they've got a lot cheaper. Another thing is that driving is a lot nicer than waiting for a bus. The trouble is that if everyone buys a car the roads get packed.

1.8 Paraphrasing

1. When writing it is necessary to find synonyms in order to provide variety and interest for the reader:

General Motors is the largest motor company in the world, with total revenues amounting to 15% of the global automotive market. The giant firm employs 360,000 people internationally.

largest company	giant firm
motor	automotive
in the world	global/internationally

- a) Synonyms are not always exactly the same in meaning, but it is important not to change the register. Firm is a good synonym for company, but boss is too informal to use for manager.
 - b) Synonyms are also needed when paraphrasing or note-taking to avoid plagiarism.
2. a) The accuracy of a synonym is often dependent on context. Both pupil and student could be used to identify a 15-year-old schoolgirl, but when she goes to university only student is normally used. Scholar might be a possible synonym, but it is very formal. Similarly, at university a lecturer could also be called a teacher, but in school the only possible synonym for teacher is the old-fashioned master or mistress.
 - b) Many basic words, e.g. culture, economy, society or science, have no effective synonyms.

5. Identify the synonyms in this text by underlining them and linking them to the word they are substituting for.

Example: agency – organisation

The chairman of the UK's food standards agency has said that a national advertising campaign is necessary to raise low levels of personal hygiene. The organisation is planning a £3m publicity programme to improve British eating habits. A survey has shown that half the population do not wash before eating, and one in five fail to wash before preparing food. There are over 6 million cases of food poisoning in this country every year, and the advertising blitz aims to cut this by 20%. This reduction, the food body believes, could be achieved by regular hand washing prior to meals.

6. In the following text, replace all the words or phrases in italics with suitable synonyms.

A leading French company has started a new programme to reduce costs. The company's programme aims to reduce costs by $100 million. All staff have had pay cuts and work longer. The company aims to increase profits by 35% next year, and promises that pay for all staff will be increased if that happens.

2.15 Variation in Sentence Length

cross-reference

2.13 Style

1. Short sentences are clear and easy to read:

Britain is an example of the university funding problem.

But too many short sentences are monotonous:

Britain is an example of the university funding problem. Fees were introduced in 1997. Spending per student had fallen by 25% since 1990. Demand continues to grow for places on the most popular courses.

Long sentences are more interesting but can be difficult to construct and read:

Britain is an example of the university funding problem, since although fees were introduced in 1997 spending per student had dropped by 25% since 1990, while demand continues to grow for places on the most popular courses.

2. Effective writing normally uses a mixture of long and short sentences.

Rewrite the following paragraph so that instead of six short sentences there are two long and two short sentences.

Worldwide, enrolments in higher education are increasing. In developed countries over half of all young people enter college. Similar trends are seen in China and South America. This growth has put financial strain on state university systems. Many countries are asking students and parents to contribute. This leads to a debate about whether students or society benefit from tertiary education.

3. Rewrite this paragraph in fewer sentences.

It is widely recognised that a university degree benefits the individual. A graduate can expect to find a better job with a higher salary. In the USA the average graduate will earn $1 million more in a lifetime than a non-graduate. Many governments now expect students to pay a proportion of tuition costs. It is argued that this discriminates against poorer students. Some countries give grants to students whose families have low incomes. Their education is seen to be beneficial for the nation as a whole.

4. The following sentence is too long. Divide it into shorter ones.

China is one developing country (but not the only one) which has imposed fees on students since 1997, but the results have been surprising: enrolments, especially in the most expensive universities, have continued to rise steeply, growing 200% overall between 1997 and 2001; it seems in this case that higher fees attract rather than discourage students, who see them as a sign of a good education, and compete more fiercely for places, leading to the result that a place at a good college can cost $8,000 per year for fees and maintenance.

5. It can be effective to either begin or end a paragraph with a short sentence:

Imposing tuition fees can cause political difficulties in both developing and developed nations. In Scotland the introduction of fees, at the same time as maintenance grants were ended, led to a marked decline in enrolments from poorer students. Fees have now been abolished in Scotland.

Modify the following so that it has a short first or last sentence.

Developing countries are under the greatest financial pressure, and may also experience difficulties in introducing loan schemes for students, since the lack of private capital markets restricts the source of borrowing for governments, which are often unable to raise sufficient cheap funds, while a further restraint has been the high default rates by students unable to repay their loans.

6. Write a paragraph about university funding in your country. Use a mixture of short and long sentences.

World tea consumption 1999

Read the following descriptions of the chart on the left. Which is better?

- a) The chart shows the quantity of tea consumed by the world's leading tea-consuming nations. India and China together consume more than half the world's tea production, with India alone consuming about one third. Other significant tea consumers are Turkey, Russia and Britain. 'Others' includes the United States, Iran and Egypt.
- b) The chart shows that 31% of the world's tea is consumed by India, 23% by China and 8% by Turkey. The fourth largest consumers are Russia, Japan and Britain, with 7% each, while Pakistan consumes 5%. Other countries account for the remaining 12%.

4. Complete the following description of the chart below.

The chart shows population a) in a variety of countries around the world. It b) the extreme contrast c) crowded nations such as South Korea (475 people per sq. km) and much d) countries such as Canada (3 people per sq. km). Clearly, climate plays a major e) in determining population density, f) the least crowded nations g) to have extreme climates (e.g. cold in Russia or dry in Algeria).

5. Complete the following description of the table below.

Marriage and divorce rates (per 1,000 population)

Country	Marriage rate	Divorce rate
Britain	10.7	3.4
United States	8.6	4.7
Turkey	8.0	0.5
Iran	7.8	0.5
Japan	6.2	1.8
Russia	5.2	3.2
Spain	5.2	0.8
South Africa	4.0	0.9

The a) shows the wide variations in marriage and divorce rates in a b) of countries. The c) rate varies from 10.7 per thousand in d) to 4.0 in South Africa, while the divorce e) ranges from 4.7 in the United States to 0.5 in Turkey and f) It appears that in the United States more than g) of all marriages end in divorce, while in Turkey the h) is less than 10%. This suggests that in countries such as the United States and Britain the high marriage rate may be a i) of the high divorce rate.

6. When referring to visual information in the text, the word figure is used for everything (such as maps, charts and graphs) except tables. Figures and tables should be numbered and given a title. Titles of tables are written above, while titles of figures are written below the data. As with other data, sources must be given for all visual information.

3. Accuracy in Writing

Student Introduction

Accuracy is only one aspect of the total fabric of good writing. Few teachers will be concerned by one minor mistake with a preposition or plural in a sentence. But if a student is making mistakes in every other word there is likely to be serious confusion about meaning, so that the teacher is unable to mark the work fairly. Many of the most common error types are highlighted in unit 1.16 Rewriting and Proof-reading.

Non-native users of English tend to have problems that relate to their mother tongue. Japanese speakers, for example, find it difficult to use articles in English because these are not found in Japanese. It is unrealistic for overseas students to expect to reach 100% accuracy (and many native English speakers have similar difficulty). But they should aim to steadily improve their accuracy, in order to make their work as clear and readable as possible.

The components in Accuracy in Writing have been chosen on the basis that they regularly cause difficulty and confusion in students' writing. These units are not intended to replace a standard grammar reference book; instead they assume a good basic knowledge of English grammar and focus on those areas of concern to the writer, rather than the speaker, of English.

As in Part 2, the units are arranged alphabetically. Students may already be aware of their weaknesses and want to focus on those, or they may seek specific assistance after getting feedback on an essay. The two tests of accuracy in the Writing Tests section can also be used to pinpoint weak areas.

3.1 Abbreviations

1. Abbreviations are an important and expanding feature of contemporary English.

They are used for convenience, and familiarity with abbreviations makes both academic reading and writing easier. Three main types can be found:

- a) shortened words – photo (photograph)
- b) acronyms – UNESCO
- c) others – NB

a) Shortened words are often used without the writer being aware of the original form. Bus comes from omnibus, which is never used in modern English, but refrigerator is still better in written English than the informal fridge. Public house is now very formal (pub is acceptable), but television should be used instead of the idiomatic telly.

b) Acronyms are made up of the initial letters of a name or phrase (Aids = acquired immune deficiency syndrome). They are read as words. The more official acronyms are written in capitals (NATO), but others use lower case (nimby). NATO stands for North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, which is a real body, while nimby stands for not in my back yard, which is a concept.

c) Other abbreviations are read as sets of individual letters. They include names of countries, organisations and companies (USA/BBC/IBM), and also abbreviations which are only found in written English (PTO = please turn over/Rd = Road). Note that in many cases such abbreviations are widely used without most users knowing the meaning of the individual letters (e.g. DNA/DVD/ABS).

2. All academic subjects employ abbreviations to save time. Examples from business/economics include:

GDP = gross domestic product	PR = public relations
PLC = public limited company	CEO = chief executive officer
IMF = International Monetary Fund	WTO = World Trade Organization

3. There are many standard abbreviations found in some types of writing which have a full stop after them to show that it is a shortened form (St. = saint).

Other examples are govt. (government), co. (company) and Oct. (October). With type (b) and (c) abbreviations there is no standard pattern for using full stops, so both BBC and

B.B.C. are used. There is, however, a tendency to use full stops less. The important thing is to employ a consistent style in your work.

4. Abbreviations can be confusing.

PC, for example, can mean Police Constable (in Britain), personal computer and also politically correct. CD may stand for compact disc or corps diplomatique. PM could be Prime Minister or post meridian. It is useful to be aware of these potential confusions.

1.7 Note-making

5. a) Certain abbreviations are found in all types of academic writing. They include:

cf. = compare

e.g. = for example

et al. = and others (used for giving names of multiple authors) ibid. = in the same place (to refer to a source mentioned immediately before) i.e. = that is

K = thousand

NB = take careful note

op. cit. = in the source mentioned previously p.a. = yearly

pp. = pages

re = with reference to

b) Other abbreviations are very subject specific and may be special to one article. In that case they need explaining:

... the developing countries with the highest per-capita dietary energy supplies (DES)

... one delegate expressed surprise that Call Centres (CCs) should ...

6. Explain the abbreviations in the following sentences.

3.3 Adverbs

- Adverbs are used in academic texts in a variety of ways. Among the most important are:
 - to provide more detail, with verbs and adjectives:
Reasonably good data are available for only . . .
. . . decomposition eventually ceases in modern landfills
 - individually, often at the beginning of sentences, to introduce new points:
Currently, the earth's atmosphere appears to be . . .
Alternatively, the use of non-conventional renewable energies . . .
(These can be similar in function to conjunctions.)
- Adverbs linked to verbs and adjectives usually fall into three groups.
 - Time (when?) previously published retrospectively examined
 - Degree (how much?)
declined considerably contribute substantially
 - Manner (in what way?)
medically complicated remotely located
- Adverbs used individually need to be employed with care. It is dangerous to overuse them, since they are often like the author's 'voice', commenting on the topic. As the academic writer aims to be objective, adverbs like fortunately or remarkably may be unsuitable. However, other, less subjective adverbs can be useful for opening paragraphs or linking ideas. The following examples are often followed by a comma.

Others are commonly used to show changes in amount:

The most suitable adverb depends on what is being discussed. For example,

. . . some parameters might depend on the degree of water content in the sand

. . . women tend to value privacy more than men

Areas where caution is particularly important include:

- outlining a hypothesis which needs to be tested (e.g. in an introduction)
- discussing the results of a study, which may not be conclusive
- commenting on the work of other writers

2. Caution is needed to avoid making statements which are too simplistic:

Poor education leads to crime.

Such statements are rarely completely true. There is usually an exception which needs to be considered.

Caution can be shown in several ways:

(modal verb) Poor education can lead to crime.

(adverb) Poor education frequently leads to crime.

(verb/phrase) Poor education tends to lead to crime.

There is a tendency for poor education to lead to crime.

Other verbs which imply tentative or cautious findings are:

The animals displayed more active behaviour after taking the supplements, and their memory improved. In addition, their appearance became more youthful and their appetite increased.

cross-reference

2.13 Style

1. The passive is used when the writer wants to focus on the result, not on the cause:

The book was written by my father. (passive)

My father wrote the book. (active)

In the first sentence, the emphasis is on the book, in the second on the writer. So the passive is often used in written English when the cause (a person or thing) is less important or unknown.

The treaty will be signed next year. (by someone)

The tower was destroyed a century ago. (by something)

The cause of the action can be shown by adding by . . .:

The ship was launched in 1908 by Princess Mary.

2. The passive is also used in written work to provide a more impersonal style:

The findings were evaluated.

Change the following into the passive.

- a) We collected the data and compared the two groups.
- b) I interviewed 120 people in three social classes.
- c) They checked the results and found several errors.

4. In most texts the active and the passive are mixed.
 Read the following article and underline the passives.

BOOTS THE CHEMISTS

When John Boot died at 45, he was worn out by the strain of establishing his herbal medicine business. He had worked his way up from his early years as a farm labourer to be the owner of a substantial business. He was born in 1815, became a member of a Methodist chapel in Nottingham, and later moved to the city.

Concerned by the situation of the poor, who were unable to afford a doctor, in 1849 he opened a herbal medicine shop which was called the British and American Botanic Establishment. In the early stages John was helped financially by his father in law, while his mother provided herbal knowledge.

On his death in 1860 the business was taken over by his wife, and she was soon assisted by their 10-year-old son, Jesse. He quickly showed the business ability which transformed his father's shop into a national business.

He opened more shops in poor districts of the city and pioneered advertising methods. Another innovation was to do all his business in cash, rather than offering credit.

5. Could all the passives in the text above be replaced by the active? What would be the result if most of them were?
6. The passive is used more in written than in spoken English, but should not be overused, as it can give a very formal tone. In the following text, which continues the history of Boots, passives are used throughout. Change some of them into the active.

In 1889 he was introduced to Florence Rowe, the daughter of a bookseller, while on holiday. Her influence was felt by the business after they were married: the product range was enlarged to include stationery and books. In addition she was responsible for the introduction of the Boots subscription library and in-store cafes.

During World War I the factories were used to make a variety of products from sterilisers to gas masks. But by 1920 Jesse was being attacked by arthritis and was worried by the economic prospects. Boots was sold to an American rival for £2m. This, however, was made bankrupt during the Depression and Boots was then bought by a British group for £6m, while Jesse's son, John, was made chairman. The famous No. 7 cosmetics range was launched in the 1930s. In the 1939–45 war the saccharin equivalent to 700,000 tons of sugar was produced in the factories.

5. When writing paragraphs, it is important to be clear about which time phrases control the tenses of verbs:

For years, the condition of the family has produced some of the strongest debate heard in America. The statistics of collapse have appeared simple and clear. The proportion of children born outside marriage rose from 18% in 1980 to 33% in 1999. The share of households made up of two parents and their children fell from 45% in 1960 to only 23% in 2000.

In this case, the time phrase For years controls the tense of the first two sentences (present perfect). The following two sentences are in the simple past because of the dates 1980, 1999, 1960 and 2000 which show finished periods.

6. Read the text below and select the most suitable tense for each verb in brackets, considering the time phrases in italics.

For a long time gardeners a) (suspect) that using green fingers is just as effective as talking softly to plants to encourage growth. Scientists b) (develop) a robot that strokes young plants to make them grow stronger and faster. But after research a year ago c) (confirm) that plants need the human touch, scientists at Greenwich University d) (develop) the stroking machine they call Dr Green.

Dr Green e) (be display) at the last Chelsea Flower Show, where it f) (demonstrate) the technique of brushing the tips of young plants to produce stronger specimens. David Carey, who is leading the research, g) (say) that the machine could avoid the use of chemicals.

Currently, Dr Green h) (be test) on a large scale by a commercial grower. Stroking plants once a day i) (make) them 30% stronger, which is what you need before you plant them out. When another kind of plant was stroked once a week, it j) (develop) increased insect resistance. The research team hope that a cheap version of Dr Green k) (be available) to amateur gardeners by 2007.

4. Writing Models

Student Introduction

There are various possible formats for different types of essays, as well as non-academic texts such as letters and CVs. For instance, if a selection of formal letters is studied it will be seen that different styles of headings and layout are used by different organisations. However, the following models are provided so that students can use the outlines confident that they will be acceptable in most situations.

Many courses require students to conduct a survey, so unit 4.3 Reporting and Designing Surveys provides a model for a survey report. Unit 4.4 Taking Ideas from Sources gives a model for the vital process of note-making, paraphrasing and referencing. Comparison and discussion are common components of essay titles, and the models given here show one way of answering the questions. However, it must be remembered that both comparison and discussion (plus other elements) may be needed in the same essay.

Faculties and departments may give new students guidance (e.g. handbooks) about what is required in terms of style and layout, and if this is not available it is worth asking your teacher whether it is acceptable to use sub-headings, numbering and other layout features.

2. There is considerable debate about the format of CVs, and much depends on your experience and the area you are working in. The example given below is relatively short, as would be expected for a recent graduate.

STUDENT EXPERIENCE OF PART-TIME WORK

Introduction

With the introduction of course fees and the related increase in student debt, more students are finding it necessary to work part-time. The survey was a) to find out how this work affects student life and study. The research was done by asking students selected at b) on the campus to complete a c) (see Appendix 1). Fifty students were d) on Saturday April 23rd, with approximately equal numbers of male and female students.

Findings

Of the e), 30% currently had part-time jobs, 20% had had part-time jobs, but half had never done any work during university semesters (see Table 1). f) who were working or who had worked were next asked about the reasons for taking the jobs. The most common reason was lack of money (56%), but many students said that they found the work useful experience (32%) and others g) social benefits (12%).

Table 1. Do you have or have you had a part-time job?

	Men	Women	Total	%
Have job now	8	7	15	30
Had job before	4	6	10	20
Never had job	14	11	25	50

The twenty-five students with work experience were next asked about the effects of the work on their studies. A significant h) (64%) claimed that there were no negative effects at all. However, 24% said that their academic work suffered i), while a small j) (12%) reported serious adverse results, such as tiredness in lectures and falling marks.

Further k) examined the nature of the work that the students did. The variety of jobs was surprising, from van driver to busker, but the most l) areas were catering and bar work (44%) and secretarial (32%). Most students worked between 10 and 15 hours per week, though two (8%) worked over 25 hours. Rates of pay were m) near the national minimum wage, and averaged £5.20 per hour.

The final question invited students to comment on their experience of part-time work. Many (44%) made the point that students should be given larger grants so that they could concentrate on their studies full-time, but others felt that they gained something from the experience, such as meeting new people and getting insights into various work environments. One student said that she had met her current boyfriend while working in a city centre restaurant.

Conclusions

It is clear that part-time work is now a common aspect of student life. Many students find jobs at some point in their studies, but an overwhelming majority (88%) of those deny that it has a damaging effect on their studies. Most students work for only 2–3 hours per day on average, and a significant number claim some positive results from their employment.

Obviously, our survey was limited to a relatively small n) by time constraints, and a fuller study might modify our findings in various ways.

1.6 Selecting Key Points

1. You have been told to write an essay on the following title:

Can money buy happiness?

You have found the following text which seems relevant to this topic. It is part of an article by A. Penec in a journal called Applied Econometrics (volume 44, pages 18–27) published in 2003.

Read it, and underline the key points.

THE MEASUREMENT OF HAPPINESS

In the last 50 years there has been no apparent increase in personal happiness in Western nations, despite steadily growing economies. In both Europe and the USA surveys have found no greater level of happiness since the 1950s, which seems strange since wealthier people generally claim to be happier than poorer people. In America, for example, more than a third of the richest group said they were 'very happy', while only half this number of the poorest made the same claim. Although it would be logical to expect that rising national wealth would lead to greater national happiness, this has not happened. Individually, more money does seem to increase happiness, but when everyone gets richer, no-one appears to feel better.

Economists have recently paid more attention to studying happiness, instead of the more traditional GDP per person. One suggestion has been that people rapidly get used to improvements, and therefore devalue them. Central heating is a good example: whereas 30 years ago it was a luxury item, today it is standard in nearly every home.

2. The text contains four key points:

- a) In the last 50 years there has been no apparent increase in personal happiness in Western nations, despite steadily growing economies.
- b) . . . which seems strange since wealthier people generally claim to be happier than poorer people.
- c) Individually, more money does seem to increase happiness, but when everyone gets richer, no-one appears to feel better.

3. The next step is to make notes of these points, using paraphrase:

- a) Although W. economies expanded since 1950s, no parallel growth in happiness.
- b) But most rich people say they are happier than poor.
- c) Money appears to make individuals happier but not society as a whole.
- d) People soon get accustomed to developments, so don't appreciate them.

- 2.11 References and Quotations

4. These points can now be combined into one paragraph of your essay, using conjunctions where necessary, and including a reference to your source:

Penec (2003) argues that although Western economies have expanded since the 1950s, there has been no parallel growth in happiness. Surveys indicate that rich people generally say they are happier than poor people, but it appears that although individuals may become happier society as a whole does not. One possible answer is that people soon become accustomed to improvements and so do not appreciate them.

5. Continue the same process with the next section of the text to produce another paragraph of your essay:

A further explanation for the failure of wealth to increase happiness is the tendency for people to compare their own position to that of their neighbours. Studies show that people would prefer to have a lower income, if their colleagues got less, rather than a higher income while colleagues got more. In other words, happiness seems to depend on feeling better off than other people, rather than on any absolute measure of wealth. Further research suggests that having free time is also closely linked to happiness, so that the pattern of working harder in order to buy more goods is unlikely to increase well-being. Yet Western societies generally encourage employees to spend as much time at work as possible.

6. Notes on the second section might be:

- a) Happiness often depends on feeling wealthier than others.
- b) People believe that leisure = happiness, so working longer to get extra goods won't lead to happiness.

These points could be summarised as:

Another explanation Penec presents is that happiness is often dependent on a comparison with others, so that if neighbours are also getting richer there is no apparent improvement. A further factor relates to leisure, which is widely equated with happiness. Consequently the idea of increasing workload to be able to purchase more goods or services is not going to result in greater happiness.

7. The entire section of your essay which makes use of this source is as follows:

COMPARE CLASSROOM LEARNING WITH INTERNET-BASED TEACHING. IS THE LATTER LIKELY TO REPLACE THE FORMER?

Since the late 1990s internet-based teaching (also known as e-education) has emerged as a potential rival to traditional classroom learning. It normally involves having access to a secure site on the internet where a graded series of lessons are available, and which have assignments sent and returned by email. Although on-line courses are now offered by many institutions, it is by no means clear that they offer real advantages compared to classroom education. Little research has been done so far on their effectiveness, but this essay sets out to examine the arguments on both sides and attempts to draw conclusions from them.

Two main advantages of internet use in education are put forward. Firstly, it is seen as more economical, in that once a course is prepared, it can be used by large numbers of students. The savings made by not having to employ so many teachers should be reflected in cheaper course fees. The second benefit is convenience; instead of having to attend classes at fixed times and places, students are free to study when they choose and progress at their own pace. Furthermore, by studying from home there is no need to travel to the college or university, saving both time and money. A student living in a small town in China, for example, can now study a course at an American college without the worry of travelling, accommodation or homesickness.

Despite the considerations mentioned above, classroom learning shows no signs of being replaced by e-learning. It seems that face-to-face contact with a teacher is still widely regarded as the best way for students to make progress, despite the expense and inconvenience involved. Not only the personal contact with a teacher, but also the support and encouragement gained from being part of a class may be one reason for this. Membership of a group may also create a useful spirit of competition, which stimulates learning.

Given the increasing pressure on university places in many countries, internet-based teaching is often seen as a convenient development. However, e-learning eliminates personal contact and travel from education, which are possibly the aspects many students value. Sitting at home working on a computer may be economical, but clearly cannot replace the social experience of attending courses. However, there are many people who are unable, either through work or family commitments, or due to lack of funds, to go to classes, and who would clearly find internet learning beneficial. On-line courses can also be used to support taught courses, for instance by providing access to extra materials. In many ways these kinds of courses are similar to 'universities of the air', such as Britain's Open University, which have developed distance learning so successfully in the last 40 years.

Faced by growing demand for university places, more institutions are likely to develop on-line courses, but the apparent benefits of e-learning may be less than are generally believed. Students seem to value the personal contact of the classroom highly, despite its cost and inconvenience. There may be a role for internet-based courses to supplement teacher-taught ones, and certainly for people with other commitments they will be the only practical option. There is an urgent need for research on the effectiveness of this type of learning, which should help maximise its advantages in the future.

4.6 Discussion Essay

2.6 Discussion

1. Read the essay carefully and then decide which of the headings below match each of the paragraphs 1–7.

- A. The impact of education E. Other factors
B. Discussion/example F. Introduction – definitions
C. Introduction – aims and overview
D. Conclusion G. Limits of education

EDUCATION IS THE MOST IMPORTANT FACTOR IN NATIONAL DEVELOPMENT – DISCUSS.

1. Education must be considered on several different levels, so that today most Western countries are concerned with provision from nursery to higher education, while developing countries attempt to deliver basic education (e.g. reading and writing) to their people. 'National development' will be defined in this essay as the development of a country's economy, since this is most commonly seen as the function of education provided by the state. For example, many European countries began providing primary education for all citizens in the late nineteenth century, in the phase of early industrialisation.
2. This paper attempts to evaluate the importance of these varying levels of educational provision in encouraging economic growth, compared to other factors such as national culture, natural resources and government. The role of education in fostering development will be examined first, and then other factors affecting growth will be considered.
3. At its simplest, education sets out to teach literacy and numeracy. People who can read and count are capable of being trained for many roles in the industrial or service sectors, as well as learning by themselves. Even in the simplest economies, dependent on agriculture, the education of women has been shown to lead to dramatic improvements in family welfare. In more developed economies further skills are required, such as languages, engineering and computing. Good education does not merely teach people how to function passively, but provides them with the skills to ask questions and therefore make improvements. At university level, education is closely involved in research which leads to technical and social advances.
4. Yet education does not operate in a vacuum: cultural, religious, legal and other factors all influence the rate of economic growth. Soviet Russia, for example, had an advanced educational system, but many graduates were under-employed due to the restrictions of the political system. Similar situations exist in many countries today because of political restraints on the economy which prevent fast enough expansion to create sufficient jobs. Clearly, development requires efficient and honest government to encourage a dynamic economy.

5. A strong work ethic, as found in the USA or Japan, also aids growth. In such societies children are brought up to believe that both the individual and society will benefit from hard work. Natural resources such as oil are another consideration. Brunei, for instance, previously a poor country reliant on fishing, today has one of the highest per capita GDPs in the world. A clear and effective legal system also encourages development.
6. It is difficult to think of a situation where education has been the principal agent in fostering growth. For example, in the world's first industrial revolution, which occurred in eighteenth-century Britain, the majority of people were still illiterate (some pioneer industrialists themselves could not read or write). It seems that the availability of capital through the banking system, and a secure political and legal environment were more crucial in this case.
7. However, despite these considerations, education clearly has an important part to play in developing the skills and abilities of the people. Ultimately, they are the most important resource a country possesses, and their education is a priority for all successful states.

These tests can be used to assess different aspects of writing performance. The accuracy tests (1 and 3) check the use of particular word classes such as conjunctions or prepositions. Students having difficulties with, for example, articles, should look at the relevant unit in Part 3. The second test assesses cohesion and test 4 is a comparison. They can be used in the classroom or for self-assessment.
